FOR NATIONAL SECURITY—

Psychological Warfare

BY BRIG. GEN. ROBERT A. MCCLURE, GSC

THE Department of the Army's Psychological Warfare organization, which has been engaged primarily in long-range planning since the end of hostilities in 1945, is again moving toward full scale operation.

To be known as the "Office of the Chief of Psychological Warfare," the staff will consist of approximately 100 people, one-third service personnel and two-thirds civilian. Among the latter will be experts in the various information media fields which are the vehicles of the propaganda offensive.

Psychological warfare's objectives are both strategic and tactical. From a strategic standpoint, it will be the mission of "PsyWar" in the field to support, during time of war, the national global information programs of the United States within a theater of operations. Tactically, its operations will be designed to aid the attainment of military objectives by timely and effective attacks on the enemy's morale, by inducing his surrender and by causing defection and dissatisfaction within his ranks and among his civilian populations. Concurrently, other "PsyWar" units will be engaged in conducting operations to sustain the morale and courage of friendly or captive civilian populations in the combat area.

The Office of the Chief of Psychological Warfare will consist basically of four divisions, Personnel and Training, Intelligence, Plans and Operations and Research and Materiel Requirements.

The responsibilities of its Personnel and Training Division will include the procurement of qualified personnel for psychological warfare operations, the supervision of schooling and preparation of training literature.

The Intelligence and Evaluation Division will concern itself with guiding the collection of and disseminating intelligence peculiar to psychological warfare and with evaluating the effectiveness of our own, our allies and our enemies' propaganda efforts, with a view to improving our techniques and countering those of the enemy.

The Plans Division will be responsible for all psychological warfare planning with particular emphasis on coordination of plans and policies with the Navy and the Air Force at the service level, with other interested departments and agen-

Navy Ship Program Gets Committee OK

A naval shipbuilding and conversion program, estimated to cost nearly three billion dollars, was unanimously approved by the House Committee on Armed Services this week, just one day after it was received from the Department.

Action came after a two-hour closed session in which the committee heard testimony from Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, and Rear Adm. David H. Clark, Chief of the Bureau of Ships.

Included in the authorization program is the construction of a large aircraft carrier "not to exceed 60,000 tons," similar, though not identical, in design and purpose to the so-called super-carrier whose cancellation by Secretary of Defense Johnson led to the resignation of former Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan and laid the seeds for the bitter inter-service controversy before the House Committee in the Fall of 1949.

The program authorizes

(a) Construction of 173 new ships, including the big carrier, to cost not less than $1,000,000,000 ($235,000,000 for the carrier).

(b) Conversion of 291 vessels at a cost of not less than $1,000,000,000.

It was unofficially estimated that the completed program will cost nearly $3,000,000,000. A third supplementary appropriation bill, scheduled to be submitted by 1 March, is planned to provide the money needed now for this program.

Concerning the large aircraft carrier, the following background information was supplied to members of the Committee in advance of their voting on the project:

"During the late phases of the Pacific War, Carrier Task Force Commanders reported an ever-increasing need for larger, heavier, carrier-based aircraft to accomplish war missions. To accommodate these larger aircraft, they strongly recommended construction of an aircraft carrier larger than either the 27,000-ton Essex-Class or the 45,000-ton Midway-Class carriers.

"Studies of the need for such a carrier were originally instituted in the Navy Department by the late Admiral Marc Mitscher, Commander of the famed Task Force 58. Construction of a 65,000-ton flush deck aircraft carrier was approved by the Navy Department for planning purposes in January, 1946.

"By October 1947, detailed designs and plans became sufficiently firm to justify a budget request for the construction of this carrier. Such a request was accordingly submitted in the Navy's budget for 1949. The budget request was approved by the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary of Defense, the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, and by the President, and funds to undertake construction of the carrier were contained in the Department of the Navy Appropriation Act, 1949.

"The contract for the construction of the 65,000-ton carrier United States was awarded to the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company on 10 August 1948. The keel was laid at Newport News on 18 April 1949. Construction of the carrier was can-

AF Reorganization

A House Armed Services subcommittee, headed by Representative Paul Kilday (D-Tex) this week began testimony on a bill sponsored by Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga) to provide a formal organization for the Air Force, as was voted last year for the Army.

"Congress has been derelict in not having codified the Air Force heretofore," said Representative Kilday. He added that the Air Force has been a "free-wheeling" organization, but remarked that it was not the intent of Congress to harness the Air Force.

This last statement came after Secretary of the Air Force Thomas K. Finletter had declared that the Air Force would prefer a delay in enactment of organizational legislation.

"The Air Force would prefer not to have a bill at this time," the Secretary said. "It does not want to be harnessed."

Medical Policy Council

Secretary of Defense Marshall has signed a directive abolishing the Office of Medical Services and the Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee and establishing an "Armed Forces Medical Policy Council" composed of the three Surgeons General, three civilian members and a civilian chairman.

The Surgeons General had not been members of the old Armed Forces Medical Advisory Council since early in 1949.

Mr. Charles P. Cooper, who had been chairman of the Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee for three years, was presented with the Certificate of Appreciation by Deputy Secretary Lovett.

Dr. Richard L. Meiling, former Director of the Office of Medical Services, has been retained as Chairman of the new Medical Policy Council. He will also be advisor and assistant to the Secretary of Defense on medical and health matters, but the Directive provides that he "will be guided in such advice by the views of the Council."

The Directive not only restores the Surgeons General to top level policy making but contains a specific provision that if any one of them dissents from the decisions of the Council he may appeal direct to the Secretary of Defense.

In addition to the Chairman, present members of the Council are Maj. Gen. Raymond W. Bliss, Surgeon General of the Army; Rear Adm. Clifford A. Swanson, Surgeon General of the Navy; Maj. Gen. Harry G. Armstrong, Surgeon General of the Air Force. They will serve with three civilians to be selected by the Secretary of Defense from among national authorities in medical and health fields.

The Council will develop basic medical and health policies for the Department of Defense and review those of the three military departments. It will collaborate closely with other defense agencies, such as the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the Muni-

2244 Temp. Cpts. Announced by Army

The Army completed the first phase of its expansion temporary officer promotion program with the advancement, effective 30 Dec. of 2244 lieutenants—476 Regulars and 1768 non-Regulars—to the temporary rank of captain.

Additional temporary promotions to the ranks of captain, major, lieutenant colonel and colonel are slated for early 1951. Although no official statement has been made, it is expected that the first of these new temporary promotions will be made in about a month or six weeks.

Whether the procedures used in selecting officers for higher temporary rank will be modified is not known definitely at this time. However, the complex subject of temporary promotions has been under close study during recent weeks and it is likely that there will be some changes in promotion policies to meet new requirements and to provide for a continuing equitable system.

The 2244 temporary promotions to captain saw the selection board extend the zone of consideration for Regulars through Promotion List number 16056, while the cutoff date for non-Regulars was 31 Dec. 1946.

The advancement of these officers to the temporary rank of captain raises to 16,666 the unofficial number of temporary advancements reported in issues of THE JOURNAL during recent months. The following is a chronological summation of how the temporary promotions were effected.

The names of 885 majors promoted to lieutenant colonel and 666 to the rank of colonel were published in the issue of 9 Sept. 1950. Date of rank was 7 Sept.

The next week's issue contained the names of 785 captains named for promotion to the temporary rank of major, effective 14 Sept. Of this number, 223 were Regulars and 562 non-Regulars.

On 30 Sept. THE JOURNAL published the names of 2218 lieutenants promoted to captain, effective 27 Sept., of whom 380 were Regulars and 1838 were non-Regulars.

Thus, by the end of September, the Army had given temporary promotions to 4554 officers in the first round of advancements.

The 7 Oct. issue listed the names of 124 Medical Corps captains—88 Regulars and 36 non-Regulars—promoted to temporary rank of major, effective 14 Sept.

The second round of Army Promotion List advancements was initiated with the promotion of 1613 first lieutenants to captain, of whom 457 were Regulars and 1156 non-Regulars. Their promotions, effective 22 Sept., were published in the 21 Oct. issue.

THE JOURNAL of 4 Nov. carried the names of 1698 more captains promoted to major, including 528 Regulars and 1170

Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., Daily News—"What we Americans must resolve this New Year's Day is abundantly clear. We must make ourselves as strong militarily as our resources in men and material will allow. For only in the full marshalling of our strength is there any hope of peace."

Indianapolis Times—"Defense officials should make fewer speeches worrying about the how large, how fast a mobilization effort the people will support, and concentrate on pushing forward the largest, fastest effort possible."

New York Herald Tribune—"Too long the United States has suffered from short-term military policies, expedients and improvisations. Universal service, at the age when it can most easily be borne, is the best answer."

Washington, D. C., Star—"Universal military training would provide a constant reservoir of trained manpower that would enable the country safely to reduce the size of its Regular Army. It is the lack of such a training program in the past that has complicated the task of raising the minimum armed forces required in the present emergency."

Washington, D. C., Post—"Men inducted into the Armed Forces under universal service will actually be performing military duty as well as receiving training. It would hardly be a situation making for good morale if they were to receive lower pay than professional soldiers doing identical work. . . . We hope that whatever universal service legislation is introduced in Congress will avoid pay discrimination."

THE WAR IN KOREA

THE Red offensive in Korea was slowed somewhat this week by a highly successful local counter-attack by United Nations forces in central Korea. However, a heavy buildup of Red Chinese troops on the western half of the Korean front indicated an early resumption of the strong Communist drive against greatly outnumbered Allied units.

The important road and rail center of Wonju in central Korea was abandoned to the Reds last Monday, but subsequently after a successful tank-led counter-attack south of the city our troops stormed back into the town. Wonju was retaken temporarily by elements of the American Army 2d Division, to which French and Netherlands battalions were attached.

The surprise counter-attack of Allied troops came in the midst of a heavy snowstorm, catching the enemy completely off balance. Communist troops were driven back with heavy losses, but subsequently were reinforced and attempted to drive our forces from their positions around the town. The battle continued for three days and ended with Allied troops holding their positions about two miles south of Wonju, with enemy use of the town interdicted by heavy artillery fire.

It is estimated that of 7,000 North Korean Reds engaged in the struggle more than 2,100 were killed or wounded. Our casualties were relatively light. Late this week Chinese Reds were reported moving up to the Wonju area, while two North Korean divisions were attempting to bypass the town in a wide flanking movement to the east.

In the clash elements of the 6th, 10th and 27th North Korean divisions constituted the bulk of the enemy troops. The 12th North Korean Division was also identified in the immediate vicinity, west of Wonju.

The operations around Wonju were of a delaying character, designed to interfere with the major flanking operations of the enemy. Wonju is the center of a trans-peninsular rail and highway network and its possession by the enemy would endanger the security of the withdrawal of much of the Eighth Army in the western half of the front.

Chinese and North Korean Reds are engaged in a large-scale turning movement, intended to cut off Allied troops from free movement southward along the main corridor leading from Seoul to Pusan, and to prevent supplies and reinforcements from moving from Pusan to our troops at the front. For the success of this operation the Reds need possession of Wonju. Successful Allied local counter-attacks have thus far denied the enemy the use of this center.

South of Wonju a South Korean unit, moving northward to the front, unexpectedly ran into North Korean Red guerrillas in battalion strength. In the ensuing sharp encounter this small enemy force, estimated at from 600 to 800, was completely annihilated.

In the western sector near Osan, 35 miles south of Seoul, local patrol encounters of a minor nature pushed back the vanguard of the Reds and improved our positions. It is in this area that the Red buildup is proceeding at a rapid pace and where new Red attacks are momentarily expected.

With the exception of the important local action near Wonju and the minor skirmishes in the vicinity of Osan the Korean front was relatively quiet this week. Heavy snow storms greatly restricted both ground and air operations. Apparently Communist forces made little effort to maintain contact with Allied troops. United Nations patrols protecting the withdrawal probed northward seeking advance elements of the enemy, and occasionally uncovering hostile positions.

Meanwhile just behind the line on the western front the enemy has achieved an impressive buildup, indicating the imminence of a renewed offensive in this area. Over a distance of 70 air miles from Wonju in central Korea, southwest through Osan, the presence at the front of seven Chinese armies has been ascertained through prisoners captured from each.

A Chinese army at authorized strength is composed of 30,000 men, the equivalent of a small American corps. In each Red army there are three divisions. Not all of the 21 divisions in the seven armies are in line, but those not in line are in close support.

In addition, at the extreme western end of the line, there is a North Korean corps of three Red divisions. Also in this area there is a division of Mongolian cavalry, composed of from 4,000 to 5,000 Red troopers. This division is probably intended primarily for use in reconnaissance. The indicated aggregate enemy strength on the western front would appear to be well over 200,000.

While the Chinese Reds heretofore have had little artillery and armor there are indications that reinforcements of both of these arms have recently arrived at the front. A Chinese Communist artillery division is believed to be in the western sector, but not in forward positions. Some 200 tanks are reinforcing front-line enemy units.

United Nations forces have clamped a strict censorship on press dispatches emanating from Korea, and Far Eastern headquarters in Tokyo has announced that hereafter news of combat operations will be released only by the Eighth Army.

Restrictions on news from Korea have been imposed in order to prevent valuable information as to strength and troop dispositions from reaching the enemy. There is reason to believe that enemy communications are inadequate, and that Allied news broadcasts are relied on to provide important military information.

Despite very adverse weather Allied planes continued this week to harass enemy troop movements and supply lines, but the number of sorties was reduced greatly below normal. In many cases the aircraft had to fly on instruments and to bomb by radar through thick snow and clouds. Airborne controllers in light T-6 planes spotted some enemy targets through breaks in the clouds for pilots of fighters and light bombers.

Air operations centered largely in the sector from Wonju to Seoul, with pilots reporting heavy attacks on 40 to 50 occupied buildings, 12 railroad cars, some vehicles and miscellaneous enemy installations. The total number of enemy troop casualties inflicted by Allied aircraft was undetermined, but on Thursday, during a three-hour favorable break in the weather, Allied fighter planes are reported to have killed or wounded 1,100 Red soldiers.

In one instance enemy troops were observed donning civilian clothing in order to infiltrate our lines, and in other cases columns of men in civilian clothes were marching in tight military formation, thus revealing their character as enemy troops, not civilian refugees. Leaflets were dropped to civilian groups informing them of this subterfuge of the enemy and warning them to keep off the highways where enemy formations are being attacked from the air.

About half the supply and troop structures under air attack were damaged or destroyed by Allied F-51 Mustang fighters at Hoesong and Kunpojong, east and south of Seoul. Shooting Star jets and a few B-26 light bombers attacked the enemy near Seoul. Pyongyang, Kyongani, Songjong-ni and several smaller centers. The thick weather prevented visual observation of results. One flight of F-80s burned or damaged about 20 wooden structures near Osan. Airborne spotters had reported that enemy troops were occupying the buildings.

Bomber Command B-29 Superfortresses used radar to locate supply and communications targets at Pyongyang, and at two east coast traffic centers, Wonsan and Changjin. Flights of these medium bombers dropped 130 tons of general purpose bombs, most of them on Pyongyang in an effort to interdict flow of enemy traffic through the North Korean capital to the south.

One B-29 bomber was forced to lag behind its formation because of mechanical difficulty. It was attacked in Northwest Korea by a flight of 15 Russian-type enemy jet fighters. In the ensuing engagement it opened fire on the hostile aircraft and flew through the clouds at low altitude to evade the enemy. The Red planes failed to follow the American bomber into the clouds and it reached its base safely. Its crew reported probable damage to one enemy fighter.

United Nations headquarters in Tokyo vigorously denied a published story by a war correspondent that General Douglas MacArthur had recommended the evacuation of our troops from Korea. The article was denounced officially as a figment of the imagination of the reporter. Pentagon officials likewise denied the report.

Adm. Hamlet Heads Carabao

Vice Adm. Harry G. Hamlet, retired Commandant of the U. S. Coast Guard, has been elected head of the Military Order of the Carabao for 1951. He will succeed General Clifton B. Cates, Commandant of the Marine Corps, as Grand Paramount Carabao of the 51-year-old veterans' group.

In selecting new officers for the coming year, the Philippine campaigners chose Col. Claire R. Bennett, USA, retired, as Grand Lead and Wheel Carabao, the Order's No. 2 post.

It was also announced that the annual "Wallow" will not be held this year due to the national emergency. Since the early days of the century, the yearly "Wallow" or dinner has been a highlight of the Washington winter season.

Admiral Hamlet, who lives at 6410 Beechwood Drive in Chevy Chase, is the first Coast Guard officer to head the Order. Normally, the post of Grand Paramount Carabao rotates among the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps members. Fleet Admiral William F. Halsey, USN, General Jonathan M. Wainwright, USA, and General Carl Spaatz, USAF, have been recent national chiefs and General Douglas MacArthur held the post years ago.

Founded in Manila in 1900 by officers serving in the Philippine Insurrection, the Carabao Order now is composed almost entirely of veterans of later campaigns in the Philippines, particularly during World War II.

Admiral Hamlet was born in Eastport, Maine, 27 Aug. 1874 and entered the Coast Guard Academy in 1894. He had long service in the Arctic and Alaskan waters and commanded the USS Marietta in European waters during World War II. He was decorated for rescuing the crew of another American warship, sunk in heavy seas off the coast of France. Prior to becoming Coast Guard Commandant in 1932, Hamlet was superintendent of the Coast Guard Academy. He is now president of the United Officers Association.

Colonel Bennett was born in Pipestone, Minnesota, 9 Sept. 1880 and entered the Army in 1902. He served in the Infantry and Quartermaster Corps during his 38-year military career. He is now secretary and treasurer of the United States Soldiers Home in Washington, D. C.

Defense Legislative 'Package'

The Department of Defense has transmitted to Congress in a single package 26 legislative items comprising about 50 per cent of the 1951 Legislative Program, but not including matters directly affected by the current national emergency.

For example, the 26 items do not include the proposal for hazardous duty pay for ground force troops, slated for early Congressional consideration.

The program was explained in the following official statement of the Department of Defense.

"The Department of Defense today (5 Jan.) has dispatched to the Congress in a single package submittal 26 legislative items representing approximately 50 per cent of the military establishment's Legislative Program for 1951.

"This package submittal represents an important phase of unification with respect to Department of Defense legislative needs. Since 1947, after enactment of the National Security Act, the Department of Defense has developed the practice of preparing its Legislative Program in advance of Congressional sessions to the extent possible as an integrated program rather than submitting individual legislative proposals to the Congress throughout the Congressional session.

"The military establishment's coordinated Legislative Program is the result of constant analysis and evaluation of the applicable laws. A unified approach to military legislation has aided materially in bringing the laws applicable to individual military departments into full consonance with one another. In effect, this coordination procedure has resulted in economy and appropriate uniformity. This is accomplished through revision or repeal of old statutes and the enactment of new legislation fitted to the current needs of the entire Department of Defense.

"Before unification, the Army and the Navy each had its own Legislative Program and the two were not coordinated. Since enactment of the National Security Act in 1947, the Legislative Programs of each of the Army, Navy, and Air Force have been coordinated within the Department of Defense before they are submitted to the Congress. This coordination is effectuated by having the three services submit their legislative proposals to the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Legal and Legislative) and, after analysis and review, a coordinated, single Legislative Program is established for the Department of Defense. Only those legislative proposals which are approved are actually sent forward to the Congress.

"The 26 items being dispatched today to the Congress represent various and sundry items involving a wide variety of the operations of the Department of Defense. These proposals do not relate to legislative matters which are directly affected by the current national emergency. Several legislative proposals involving such matters which have arisen as a result of the current emergency are under active study at this time and they will be submitted to the Congress after approval by the President.

"The list of bills transmitted to Congress today follows:

- "Correction of Error Bill
- "Claims, Correction of Records
- "Coconut Oil, Exemption of Trust Territory from Tax on
- "Gifts, Free Entry of, From Members of the Armed Forces Overseas
- "Gold Star Lapel Buttons, Replacement of

ARMY ENLISTED PAY

The average basic pay of an enlisted man in the Army is $1443, or $120.25 per month.

President Orders Speed-Up

President Truman, in his State of the Union message to Congress on 8 Jan. revealed that preparations are being made to gear the aircraft industry to a potential production of 50,000 planes per year and the tank production facilities to a capacity of 35,000 a year.

"We are not now ordering that many planes or that many tanks," said the President, "and we hope we never have to, but we mean to be able to turn them out if we need them."

The President noted that whereas a World War II B-17 cost about $275,000, a B-36 costs about $3,500,000.

At the outset of 1951, aircraft production facilities in the United States were turning out about 250 planes per month, according to Admiral DeWitt C. Ramsey, USN-Ret., president of the Aircraft Industries Association.

During World War II, Admiral Ramsey noted, that a peak unit production was achieved in March, 1944, when the output was 9,113 planes.

Explaining the increased complexity of modern aircraft production, Admiral Ramsey said: "Aircraft today are roughly twice as large and far more complicated than the aircraft produced in World War II. As a result, it takes approximately four times as many hours to build a current model as compared to the planes of 10 years ago."

In his report to the Nation, President Truman emphasized that "what we are doing is to provide the best and most modern military equipment in the world for our fighting forces."

The President stressed that in the defense build-up we are going to produce all the weapons and equipment that an Armed Forces of nearly 3,500,000 men and women will require. "Furthermore," he said, "we will make weapons for our allies, and weapons for our own reserve supplies. On top of this, we will build the capacity to turn out on short notice arms and supplies that may be needed for a full scale war."

MSTS Role in Defense

Two hundred and five thousand men, 17,500 vehicles and 350,000 tons of equipment were evacuated from Hungnam, Assistant Secretary of the Navy John T. Koehler revealed this week.

Speaking at a luncheon meeting of the Propeller Club of the Port of New York on 10 Jan., Mr. Koehler said the evacuation was conducted "in the face of greatest possible odds . . . the handicaps of bad terrain and worse weather, and . . . enemy assaults."

Personnel evacuated included 105,000 fighting men, and 100,000 civilians. Assistant Secretary Koehler said that "it would obviously have been a physical impossibility to carry out this staggering task without the ships and crews of the American merchant marine" who were "a vital component" of the operation.

He said that merchant vessels and crews also played "vital roles" at Pusan, Inchon and other Korean ports "in every operation since hostilities began." He added that "all of us in the Navy are very proud of the job done by Bill Callaghan (Rear Adm. William M. Callaghan, Commander of the Military Sea Transportation Service) and his staff throughout the Korean affair."

Mr. Koehler assured the club members that the MSTS is "not competing with private shipping." He said, "We are not engaged along lines calculated to injure our privately-owned American merchant marine nor are we launched on empire building in the realm of sea transportation." MSTS, he said, "has endeavored to fulfill its mission with the smallest harmful impact on private business."

The service "will continue to make its drafts for additional transport requirements on available private shipping," he said, and "expects to receive, and it must have, fair and reasonable freight rates and the fullest kind of cooperation."

CINCPAC Officer Cited

Lt. Comdr. Marvin G. Lee, USN, Air Estimates Officer on the staff of Admiral Arthur W. Radford, USN, Commander in Chief Pacific and U. S. Pacific Fleet, has been awarded a Bronze Star Medal for service aboard the aircraft carrier USS Valley Forge during July and August in Korea.

Universal Military Service

"Universal Military Service and Training represents what I believe is the best way to meet our immediate needs for enlarged combat forces and at the same time to provide an enduring base for our military strength."

With these words, Secretary of Defense, General Marshall, this week launched Department of Defense testimony on legislation providing for the drafting of all 18-year-olds to serve for 27 months, to be followed by affiliation with a civilian component.

Joining General Marshall on Capitol Hill was Assistant Secretary of Defense Anna M. Rosenberg, who is in charge of all manpower problems in the Department. She presented a detailed analysis of the program. Both Secretary Marshall and Assistant Secretary Rosenberg emphasized that the program would accomplish two ends: provide for immediate manpower needs and for "an enduring foundation for our future security."

With regard to the long-term ramifications in providing adequate defenses for the nation through U.M.S.T., Assistant Secretary Rosenberg said:

"This will not be an emergency bill, but a proposal for permanent legislation designed to provide the greatest long-term security with the lowest cost in men and money. It embodies the concept of universal participation and equal obligation in defense of our country. As such, it is an affirmation of our democratic heritage, an earnest of our willingness to fight for freedom and an assurance that we will be able to fight effectively if the need arises."

In outlining to the Senate Armed Services Committee, the Department's manpower proposals, Mrs. Rosenberg gave the following outline of how U.M.S.T. would function.

1. Every physically-fit 18-year-old to be liable for maximum of 27 months of service and training in armed forces.

a. Training to be not more than 6 months, with no man to be sent overseas in less than 4 months. (This provision intended to guarantee that no 18-year-old be assigned to combat area without ample training.)

b. Service to make up rest of period will total zero to 23 months at discretion of President on recommendation of the Secretary of Defense. Type of service will be same as for any other member of armed forces.

c. When emergency abates, President would have right to reduce or eliminate service requirement on uniform basis for all inductees and all services. Training requirement of 4 to 6 months would remain, but President could modify type of training.

d. Period of 3 to 6 years in Reserve component to follow UMST duty. (Reserve duty would be shorter if assigned to National Guard or Organized Reserve unit, longer if inactive.)

(1) This program will have value only if we strengthen and improve the training and organizational methods of our Reserve components. A specific program to achieve this is now being formulated, and will be presented to Congress within 6 months.

2. There will be some men who cannot be taken into the armed forces on any practical basis because they are incapable of meeting minimum physical, mental or moral qualifications for induction. No specific plans have yet been made for this group, but the President may announce measures for bringing young men in this class into the program.

3. How many men will participate in program:

a. Men who will reach 18 in fiscal year beginning July 1, 1951—1,050,000.

b. By using present induction standards for full military duty, we would be able to take 700,000 of this number.

c. Lowering our mental and physical standards for induction and accepting men for a more limited service to the maximum practical extent would raise number eligible for military service and training to 800,000.

d. This number might be increased further by special health measures for correction of remediable physical defects. Any program of this kind that might be authorized by Congress would have to be undertaken outside the military establishment, prior to induction and with the consent of the individual involved. Maximum probable estimate of those who might be made subject to service and training through such a rehabilitation program—20,000. This brings total available for induction to 820,000.

e. About 150,000 of remaining 230,000 could not qualify for military induction but might be capable of some work. Plan for this group may be announced later by the President.

f. Estimated 70,000 to 80,000 would be incapable of any type of assignment because of extreme physical, mental or moral handicaps.

Five Medals of Honor

President Truman on 9 Jan. presented Medals of Honor to members of the families of five Army heroes, who were named to receive the Nation's highest honor because of extraordinary heroism in Korea.

Mrs. Mildred D. Dean, 2518 Etna Street, Berkeley, Calif., received the Medal of Honor on behalf of her husband, Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, former commander of the 24th Infantry Division, listed as missing in action.

The wife of 1st Lt. Frederick F. Henry, Mrs. Lavon P. Henry, 1045 Harvard, Salt Lake City, Utah, accepted the Medal of Honor for her husband, also listed as missing in action.

In last week's issue of THE JOURNAL, the texts of the official citations for General Dean and Lieutenant Henry were published.

The three other Medal of Honor winners were:

M/Sgt. Travis E. Watkins, whose medal was received by his widow, Mrs. Maide S. Watkins, 215 Gay Avenue, Gladewater, Texas. Sergeant Watkins was killed in action.

SFC Charles W. Turner, whose medal was received by his mother, Mrs. Hazel O. Turner, 157 Huntington Avenue, Boston, Mass. Sergeant Turner was killed in action.

PFC Melvin L. Brown, whose medal was received by his father, Edward D. Brown of Mahaffey, Pa. Private First Class Brown is missing in action.

Hazardous Duty Pay

Legislation which would authorize hazardous duty pay for ground force personnel in Korea, retroactive to the outset of fighting, was at the Bureau of the Budget early this week for final clearance before transmittal to Congress.

The measure reportedly would provide $100 a month for officers and $50 a month for enlisted personnel.

The proposal to grant hazardous duty pay for ground force elements, which have suffered the preponderous percentage of casualties in Korea, is expected to receive strong support on Capitol Hill.

Passage of the legislation would be a great morale boost to hard-pressed troops in Korea, who have had practically no respite since the fighting began in June 1950.

Meantime, Representative Olin E. Teague (D-Tex.) has introduced a bill, H.R. 568, which would provide a combat bonus of $5 per day for members of the Armed Forces "while in actual contact with hostile ground forces, except that if such member is disabled as a direct result of an injury inflicted by such hostile ground forces, he shall continue to receive such bonus until he is either returned to duty, retired, or separated from the service."

And Representative Victor Wickersham (D-Okla.) introduced H.R. 423, which would authorize, in addition to basic pay, extra pay for enlisted personnel while on sea duty or on duty beyond the continental limits of the United States. The monthly rates for the special pay would be $75 for E-7; $67.50 for E-6; $60 for E-5; $52.50 for E-4; $45 for E-3; $37.50 for E-2; and $30 for E-1.

Honored for Radio Program

Radio Daily, in its annual awards, has given to "The Joyful Hour," Christmas radio drama, top honors as the best radio performance on the Mutual network for 1950. This drama was written by James D. Roche, formerly a lieutenant commander in the Submarine Service, stationed in Washington from 1946 to 1949 and now living in Hollywood on inactive duty. Lt. Comdr. Roche, USNR, completed for the Armed Forces Special Weapons Project, the Air Force and the AEC a series of documentary motion pictures on atomic explosion shortly before going on inactive duty.

Eighth Air Force

Brig. Gen. William J. Clinch, USAF, former Chief of Staff, Hq., Eighth Air Force, Carswell AFB, Tex., will report to USAF Headquarters, Washington, D. C., for reassignment this month.

Reactivate Two Corps

The speedy build-up of the Army was reflected this week with the announcement that two famed corps are being reactivated—the VI Corps at Camp Atterbury, Ind., to be commanded by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burrell, USA, Commandant of the Infantry School at Ft. Benning, Ga.; and the VII Corps at Ft. George G. Meade, Md., to be under command of Maj. Gen. Bryant E. Moore, USA, Superintendent of the U. S. Military Academy.

The creation of the VI and VII Corps has been made necessary by the creation of new divisions and the calling to service of six National Guard divisions and two National Guard regimental combat teams.

Although there was no official statement regarding future activities of the two corps headquarters, there is speculation that at least one may be sent at a later time to Europe as part of the force being built up under General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower.

It is recalled that in November, the Department reactivated in Europe the Seventh Army under Lt. Gen. Manton S. Eddy, USA, composed mainly of the former Constabulary and the 1st Infantry Division.

General Moore will be succeeded at West Point by Maj. Gen. Frederick A. Irving, USA, Deputy Commanding General, Sixth Army, San Francisco, Calif., who commanded the 24th Infantry Division through the New Guinea Campaign and in the invasion of Leyte and later led the 38th Division through final stages of the fighting on Luzon.

In turn, General Irving will be succeeded as Deputy Commanding General of Sixth Army by Maj. Gen. Milton B. Halsey, USA, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, Office, Chief of Army Field Forces, at Fort Monroe, Va.

Gen. Ruffner Decorated

Maj. Gen. Clark L. Ruffner, USA, Chief of Staff of X Corps has been awarded the First Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster to the Silver Star for gallantry in action in Korea.

The general was on an aerial reconnaissance flight over enemy positions on Kimpo Peninsula 30 Sept. The plane was subjected to heavy small arms and well-directed anti-aircraft fire. General Ruffner ordered his pilot to continue on his mission until he had secured information vital to the accomplishment of the X Corps mission.

Again on 12 Oct. General Ruffner made a reconnaissance flight over the enemy-held terrain to Wonsan, North Korea. Despite mortar and small arms fire, he directed his pilot to land his plane on the Wonsan Airstrip immediately behind the ground troops. He obtained the essential information and returned to Kimpo Airstrip, again over unfamiliar enemy territory.

Honor Gen. Barr

Maj. Gen. David G. Barr, USA, Commanding General U. S. Army 7th Infantry Division, has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross and the Silver Star for heroic acts in Korea.

For extraordinary heroism during the 7th Infantry Division's drive from Iwon to Hyesanjin, 21 Oct. to 22 Nov. General Barr was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross. Faced with a crafty and tenacious foe, the citation said, General Barr led his division through treacherous, mountainous terrain in sub-zero weather. Enemy resistance was crushed at Kapsan and the division advanced rapidly to the Korean-Manchurian Border under his aggressive leadership. Throughout the northward drive, the general was constantly at the front, disregarding his personal safety under continual small arms, automatic weapons and mortar fire.

For conspicuous gallantry in action on 23 Sept., the 7th Division commander was awarded the Silver Star Medal.

C., received the highest mark in the National Guard Competitive Examination for designation of Reserve component appointees to the U. S. Military Academy, it was announced this week. The top 150 boys will compete for the approximately 48 appointments available for 1951 entrance.

Five other Sullivan School students ranked among the first 18 in the examination. They are: Daniel Carlisle Dugan, George Robert Kennebeck, jr., David Allen McNeerney, John Foster McAuslan, and Thomas Lawrence Mullan, jr.

Medal for Marine Pilot

Lt. Col. Max Volcansek, a Marine Corps Night Fighter Squadron Commander, has been awarded the Silver Star Medal for conspicuous gallantry in action against the enemy. The action for which Colonel Volcansek was cited occurred during the battle for Seoul while his squadron was based at nearby Kimpoo Airfield.

Colonel Volcansek, the citation said, was assigned the mission of reducing an enemy strongpoint opposing friendly ground forces in the center of Seoul. Although he knew his plane had received damage on the first run, which later necessitated his abandoning it by parachute, and regardless of shrapnel wounds in his leg, Colonel Volcansek refused to discontinue his attacks until his ammunition was expended and the target destroyed.

Colonel Volcansek earlier was awarded the Purple Heart Medal for wounds received during the fight.

Air Lab Honors Forrestal

Acquisition by Princeton University of the plant and property formerly occupied by the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research on the Brunswick Pike, Princeton, N. J., adjoining the University property on the east bank of Lake Carnegie is announced by President Harold W. Dodds.

The buildings on the 800-acre tract of farm and woodland will be converted into a research center in the fields of aeronautical engineering, jet propulsion, chemical kinetics and related sciences to be established as a memorial to the late James Forrestal, first Secretary of Defense, a member of the Class of 1915, and a Charter Trustee of the University.

Two three-story major laboratories, and thirteen single-story buildings are available for research purposes. In addition, twenty-six family units ranging from four-room apartments to twelve-room houses are located on the property.

Heads Dept. of Pacific

Maj. Gen. Graves B. Erskine, USMC, reported to San Francisco this week to take command of the Department of the Pacific. He relieves Maj. Gen. Alfred H. Noble, Commanding General of the Marine Barracks at Camp Pendleton, Calif., who had been serving temporarily in the assignment.

General Erskine was formerly chief of the military mission to southeast Asia, and prior to that, served as Commanding General of the First Marine Division.

During World War II, General Erskine commanded the 3d Marine Division at Iwo Jima.

Nominations

President Truman on 11 Jan. resubmitted to Congress the nomination of Rear Adm. Lamont Pugh, MC, USN, to be Surgeon General and Chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery. Admiral Pugh's nomination was sent up in the closing days of the last Congress, but adjournment came before the Senate had time to act on it.

The following line officers were also nominated for temporary appointment to the grade of Rear Admiral in the Navy:

Clarence L. C. Atkeson, Jr.
John B. Pearson, Jr.
Harry Sanders
William B. Ammon
Roland N. Smoot
James H. Thach, Jr.
Frederick M. Trapnell
William K. Mendenhall, Jr.
Harry D. Felt
John M. Will
Francis M. Hughes
Murr E. Arnold
John B. Moss

The following were nominated for temporary appointment to the grade of Rear Admiral in the Supply Corps:

Robert F. Batchelder
Charles H. Gillilan

Rear Adm. Harold M. Martin, USN, was nominated to have the grade, rank, pay and allowances of a Vice Admiral while serving as a Fleet Commander.

Wins Higher Retired Pay

In a decision handed down this week by the United States Court of Claims, a retired Navy enlisted man, Christopher C. Sanders, was awarded a higher rate of retirement pay.

Sanders, after having completed more than 16 years' active service as an enlisted man in the Navy, was transferred to the Fleet Reserve in 1936 and released to inactive duty in the rating of Chief Commissary Steward. In 1940, he was recalled to active duty in that rating and served continuously during the emergency and war periods until July 1945, when he was again released from active duty. At the time of his release in 1945, he had completed more than 20 years' active duty service.

Following his retirement, he drew retired or retainer pay computed on the basis of one-third of his base pay, increased by 35 per cent for longevity on account of more than 21 years' active service.

The suit brought by Sanders was based upon Section 3 of the Act of 10 Aug. 1946, and the question involved was whether that Act so amends the Naval Reserve Act of 1938 as to allow an enlisted man receiving inactive duty pay under section 203 of the 1938 Act to include wartime active duty in computing his years of service for the purpose of determining his rate of retired pay. Or, whether a man, in order to take advantage of the Act of 10 Aug. 1946, must compute retainer or retired pay under Section 204 of the Naval Reserve Act of 1938.

In delivering the opinion of the Court, Judge Benjamin H. Littleton said that "To hold . . . that Congress would make an arbitrary distinction having the effect of forcing a man released to inactive duty under Section 203 either to give up the benefits of Section 208 or to compute his retirement pay under a formula different from that held out to him at the time of enlistment, involves both a strained interpretation of the statute and one at variance with demonstrated Congressional policy."

The Court ruled that Sanders is entitled to retired pay from 11 July 1945, to the date of the decision, based upon one-half his base pay at the time of his retirement, plus all permanent additions because of longevity. Sanders was also awarded 10 per cent for good conduct. The entry of judgment was suspended pending a computation by the General Accounting Office of the exact amount involved.

Bluejackets' Manual

A new Bluejackets' Manual, fourteenth edition, has been published by the United States Naval Institute. It is the first revision of the handbook since 1946.

Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews said of the book that it "now serves more as a training manual for the recruit and less as a general reference book for the qualified seaman."

Naval Officers Promoted

The Navy has named 846 Lieutenants (junior grade) for permanent promotion to the grade of Lieutenant in the General Line, Medical Corps, Supply Corps, Civil Engineer Corps, Chaplain Corps, Medical Service Corps, Dental Corps and Nurse Corps.

The list includes officers of the Regular Navy, USN temporary officers and Naval Reserve officers on active duty with the Regular Establishment. The promotions became effective on 1 Jan. 1951, which is also the date of rank.

Study Reorganization

If no bill had been introduced, we would not have introduced one, but we are ready to cooperate."

The Air Force organization bill was introduced by Chairman Vinson last year following an Air Force request for an increase in the number of four-star and three-star generals. Representative Vinson has contended that the Air Force should be placed under tighter Congressional control to compare with the action taken to regulate the structure of the Army and Navy.

A major point in Chairman Vinson's bill would provide for the removal from the Air Force of such "housekeeping" activities as quartermaster, engineering, medical, chaplains and legal services, with major responsibility for these activities going instead to the Army.

Secretary Finletter said he was willing for a single agency to perform such activities as medical, engineering and chaplain services for all the Armed Forces, but he protested that the Air Force should not be "singled out" for special treatment.

"If we're going to have an Air Force," he said, "we ought to have an Air Force with all the supporting elements it requires."

This brought from Representative Kil-day a statement of agreement, as he declared that removal of these activities from the Air Force "would make your service a second-class force."

During the testimony of General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF, Chief of Staff, much discussion developed regarding the extent of command authority to be vested in the Chief of Staff. General Vandenberg argued that the Chief of Staff of the Air Force should be given operational authority over activities of Air Force commands similar to that exercised by the Chief of Naval Operations over ships of the fleet.

When the subject of limiting the Deputy Chiefs of Staff to five was debated, Secretary Finletter stated: "Because of the fluidity of conditions, the Air Force should be allowed to determine how many there should be. Rank does not enter into it. Legislation should not go beyond the Vice Chief of Staff. The AF should not have to depend on the President for appointments. The Secretary should be allowed to make appointments and determine ranks. He should have the power to appoint and transfer."

The Air Force has renewed its request to Congress to increase its number of four-star and three-star generals. Now limited by the Officer Personnel Act to 17, the Air Force feels it should compare more favorably with the Army's 27 authorized generals and lieutenant generals and the 26 four-star and three-star officers.

For the present, the declaration by the President of a National Emergency removes the statutory limit on the number of top-ranking general officers.

Correlated to this request is the legislation pertaining to organization of the Air Force, hearings on which began this week in the House Armed Services Committee.

The Air Force has noted that the Army is entitled to five generals and 22 lieutenant generals; the Navy, to four admirals and 22 vice admirals; while the Air Force, under the Officer Personnel Act, is restricted to four generals and 13 lieutenant generals.

The Air Force argues thusly in a letter to Congress:

"The statutory limit on three- and four-star general officers imposed upon the Air Force by the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 constitutes a serious impediment to the efficient execution by the Air Force of its assigned roles and missions. The Department of the Air Force has accepted a world-wide responsibility which is inherent in its status as a military department. Obligations have been undertaken on a basis of parity with the other military services. To meet them, however, the Department of the Air Force has been authorized 17 general officers of the three- and four-star rank as compared with 27 for the Army and 26 for the Navy.

"Despite the obvious disparity in general officer authorization, the Air Force has been compelled to accept its full share of the burden of filling key positions in the Defense Establishment as well as of progressively greater international commitments. Any failure to accept such share of the burden would in all likelihood result in the relegation of the Air Force to a subordinate position in the national defense structure and would to that extent seriously endanger the national security. From the limited resources presently available to the Air Force, for example, certain three- and four-star general officers are serving in assignments in which they are detached from the Air Force command organization for an indefinite period of time.

"Additionally, the Air Force has certain commands, such as the Air Training Command and the Military Air Transport Service, each of which comprises an actual strength in excess of 60,000 officers and airmen, which are presently commanded by major generals, although such commands obviously merit higher rank. The Industrial College, which is coequal with the National War College and other joint schools, is commanded by an Air Force major general, whereas the commands of other comparable institutions hold the rank of lieutenant general.

"The existing ceiling on Air Force general officers above the grade of major general—many of whom are specialists in various technical fields—has given rise to a situation in which flexibility in assignment to key positions and in rotation to overseas commands has been reduced to an unworkable minimum. The requirements for officers in the grade of lieutenant general and above are, for all practical purposes, the same in each of the military services, and parity of rank among the several services, as well as with foreign military representatives, is both desirable and necessary for efficient and effective operation within the Department of Defense.

"The requirement for three- and four-star grades among the several military services cannot be determined solely upon the basis of total general officer strength, the total commissioned officer strength, or the total military strength of the respective services. This requirement depends to a far greater degree upon the roles and missions assigned to the various services than it does upon the military strength of those services. It follows, therefore, that while the Air Force is in parity with its sister services in respect to the assigned roles and missions, it does not have a similar parity in general officer authorization for officers in the grades of lieutenant general and above.

"The only equitable and practicable solution for the existing disparity among the several services in the distribution of three- and four-star grades lies in the establishment of equal ceilings for those grades among the several departments, with the limitation that such members shall not exceed 15 per cent of the total number of general officers serving on active Federal duty, and that of such number not more than 25 per cent shall be the rank of general.

"This legislation is the result of studies of the Officer Personnel Act undertaken by the Personnel Policy Board at the direction of the Secretary of Defense and is based on its recommendations with respect to immediate need for remedial legislation. In addition, the Secretary of the Air Force advises that the proposed legislation is urgently and critically needed to promote the efficient administration and operation of the Air Force."

Gen. Anderson Retires

A full military review at Maxwell AFB, Ala., last week honored Maj. Gen. Orvil A. Anderson, USAF, former commandant of the Air War College, Air University, upon his retirement after more than 33 years' service.

Responsible for the organization of the Air War College in early 1946, General Anderson assumed its command in June of that year. He has won recognition as a veteran of both lighter and heavier than air craft and as an exponent of air power and strategy.

In 1935 General Anderson established the altitude record of 72,395 feet in an ascent from Rapid City, S. D., as pilot of the airship, Explorer II. For his scientific achievement in that expedition, he was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross; the Mackay Trophy; the Harmon International Award; the Hubbard Medal of the National Geographic Society; and the Federation Aeronautique Internationale Prix Henry de La Vaulx.

His World War II duty assignments included: Chief of Plans Division of the Army Air Forces; Chairman of the Combined Operational Planning Committee, an organization of American and British air officers charged with planning operations for the strategic bombing offensive in the European Theater; Deputy Commander for Operations of the Eighth Air Force; and Senior Military Advisor of the United States Strategic Bombing Survey, a board responsible for studying the economic and military value of strategic bombing of Germany, Japan, and all occupied territories.

For the past four years General Anderson has been commandant of the Air University's Air War College, highest branch in the Air Force educational system.

According to the general, he and his family will make their home in Titusville, Fla., where they own a nearby ranch.

Air Proving Ground

According to an announcement by Maj. Gen. Bryant L. Boatner, USAF, Commanding General of the Air Proving Ground, information has been received from USAF Headquarters assigning the Armament Test Center to the Air Proving Ground at Eglin AFB, Fla.

The Armament Test Center, commanded by Maj. Gen. R. C. Coupland, USAF, already located at Eglin AFB, has previously been under the control of the Air Material Command, headquarters of which are at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

Also in this shift of command assignments, the Air Proving Ground will reassume control of the 2800th Chemical and Ordnance Test Group which has squadrons at the Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., and at the Army Chemical Center, Edgewood, Md.

Keep up with your friends by reading the Army Navy Air Force Journal each week.

Procure USAF Officers

The Air Force has released a manual governing the direct appointment of officers in the Air Force Reserve or the Air Force of the United States to meet its current requirements.

This manual, known as Air Force Manual 36-5, consolidates previous regulations and directives and "establishes uniform criteria, methods and procedures for the procurement, selection and direct appointment of certain properly qualified personnel." The manual does not pertain to the appointment of graduates of the Air Force ROTC, Aviation Cadet, or Officer Candidate School program.

Specifically, the manual supersedes AFR 45-15, AFR 45-24, AFR 45-31, and AFR 45-35, combining all direct procurement regulations into one directive. However, all applications received under the old regulations prior to 1 Feb. will be processed to completion.

Contained in the manual are eligibility requirements and processing procedures, with special sections devoted to direct appointments of Officer Specialists currently required by USAF. These specialists include appointments of chaplains, legal and medical specialists, and specialists in other categories, including postal, electronics, transportation, communications, psychology, accounting and disbursing, air installations, ground safety, topography, photomapping, map reproduction, airport engineering, weather, air police, prisoner of war interrogation, and special investigation.

In most instances, the minimum educational requirement for appointment under one of the current specialties is at least a college degree.

Appointments will be made as authorized by the Chief of Staff, USAF. These authorizations will constitute procurement objectives and will establish quotas by number, grade, and specialty for all officers to be procured.

Responsibility for direct procurement of officers has been delegated to ConAC. Supplemental instructions will be issued from time to time relative to additional fields in which commissioned personnel are needed to meet Air Force requirements.

AF Officers Win Awards

Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, Commanding General of the U. S. Far East Air Forces, recently decorated three officers of the FEAF Combat Cargo Command. The awards were for outstanding heroism and accomplishments during the evacuation of wounded U. S. personnel from Hagaru-ri airstrip and later Koto-ri, both near the Chosin reservoir in north central Korea, from 27 Nov. through 13 Dec.

The officers decorated by General Stratemeyer were Col. Robert D. Forman and Lt. Col. Phil B. Cage with the Silver Star, and 1st Lt. Thomas J. McGinley with the Legion of Merit.

Former AF Capt. Named

M. Willson Offutt, formerly Capital Airlines District Sales Manager in Birmingham, Ala., has been appointed Manager of Interline Sales in the Company's General Offices in Washington, D. C., James W. Austin, Vice President in charge of Traffic and Sales, has announced. He will replace Gilbert Paul.

During World War II, Mr. Offutt served in the Army Air Corps as a B-17 pilot and was an instructor at the Army Air Base, Greenwood, Miss. He was honorably discharged as a Captain.

AF Procurement Needs

The Air Force this week listed the occupational fields in which officers and airmen are most needed in the current expansion.

For officers, there is special need for personnel in these fields: electronics, communications, armament, finance and auditing, specialized observer (radar, navigator, bombardier), engineering (civil, mechanical, chemical and electrical), food service, personnel, business management, procurement, transportation, intelligence and cryptology, air police, weather, mathematics, physics, languages and photo interpreter.

AF Expansion Plans

Under Secretary John A. McCone of the Air Force this week told a press conference that in all probability the President's goal of increasing military aircraft production five-fold within a year would be attained. Some airplane builders have expressed doubt that this increase could be accomplished in such a short time.

Mr. McCone said that peak production would probably be reached by May 1952 and would continue at a high level for the remainder of the year. This would provide all planes at present contemplated, and subsequent production presumably would be cut back to a maintenance basis.

The Air Force official said the number of air groups would be increased substantially beyond the 84 previously announced. He declined to state the revised total but newsmen speculated that it would probably be 100.

Procurement contracts have been awarded for 90 per cent of the new planes for which funds were provided in the regular and first supplemental appropriation acts for 1951. These orders amount to about $3.4 billion. New planes will include modifications of existing types and also some new models which have been approved, but which are not yet in production.

In order to secure top production as soon as possible existing aircraft plant capacity will be used to the maximum extent, supplemented by available production facilities of other industries, particularly automobile factories and assembly plants. In this way the time required for construction of new plants and recruiting labor will be reduced or eliminated.

It is also planned to have sufficient available standby facilities to double aircraft production in the event of general mobilization. Machine tools, jigs, dies, fixtures and other mechanical equipment will be stored and ready for instant use should a major expansion become necessary. Mr. McCone declined to give production figures and goals, but the President informed Congress that it was planned to provide facilities for the annual production of 50,000 aircraft if required.

Attend USAFIT Course

The first Advanced Engineering Management Course, a graduate program to give selected officers increased proficiency in solving Air Force problems through the use of scientific methods and techniques, got underway this week at the USAFIT Institute of Technology with the enrollment of eight picked officers in a 48-week curriculum at Wright-Patterson AFB.

USAFIT's first venture in the graduate field, "the new course will enable officers to tackle comprehensive problems concerned with technical equipment and instruments of warfare," Maj. Gen. Grandison Gardner, Institute Commandant, said recently.

Making up the first group to enter the Advanced Engineering Management Course are Maj. Robert F. Long, Maj. Arnold R. Hull, Capt. Frederick S. Porter, Maj. Eugene A. Blue, Maj. Lee L. Peterson, Capt. John J. Anderson, Capt. Glenn J. Schaffer and Maj. Paul C. Murphy.

Air-Ground School

The Tactical Air Command School of Air-Ground Operations at Pope AFB, N. C., opened the first of its 1951 courses on tactical air support on 8 Jan.

A distinguished group of Army and Air Force students headed by an Army artillery expert, Brig. Gen. William W. Burgess, Division Artillery Commander of the 40th Division, will learn the latest principles in close support of ground fighting units.

Although the school is known as a Tactical Air Command school, the curriculum is handled jointly by headquarters of the Ninth Tactical Air Force at Pope AFB and the Army Air Support Center at Fort Bragg, N. C.

AF Temporary Promotions

The Air Force selection board considering approximately 2,250 eligible Regular and non-Regular officers for promotion to the temporary rank of colonel was completing its task late this week. This means that the selection list probably will be released this month.

Meantime, the Air Force was preparing to make an announcement concerning promotions for officers selected for permanent advancement to major and lieutenant colonel, who will not be considered for the forthcoming temporary promotions to those ranks.

The likelihood is that the Air Force will authorize a blanket promotion for all the officers selected for permanent advancement at an early date, certainly before the time the temporary selections are announced. Otherwise, officers selected for permanent advancements would be penalized unfairly.

New C. O. At Craig AFB

After almost four years as Commanding Officer of Craig AFB, Ala., Col. W. H. Hardy recently was reassigned to the San Antonio Air Materiel Area, Kelly AFB, Tex., and has been succeeded by Col. John H. Bundy.

Colonel Hardy was assigned to Craig on 1 Feb. 1947 as Commandant of the USAF Special Staff School. He became base commander on 1 July 1947.

The new base commanding officer, Colonel Bundy, arrived at Craig AFB from Pepperell AFB, St. Johns, Newfoundland, where he was Inspector General with the Northeast Air Command. Prior to this assignment he was base commander for 18 months at Harmon AFB, Stevensville, Newfoundland.

New School At Air Base

Representatives from state, county and district school boards, as well as the Army Engineers, Seattle District, met with Fairchild AFB officers last week to survey the site for the proposed 30-room elementary school building slated for this base.

Lt. Col. Harold F. Reverski, project officer, met previously with members of the State Board of Education in Seattle where tentative approval for the new school was given.

Alaskan Air Command

Activation of the 39th Air Depot Wing at Elmendorf AFB, Alaska, on 1 Jan., achieves immediate further coordination of logistical support for the entire Alaskan Air Command amalgamating the former 5039th Air Depot Wing and the 57th Fighter-Interceptor Wing. The single wing is intended to increase the efficiency and operations of the Air Force at this command post.

It will continue to exercise, as formerly did the 57th Fighter-Interceptor Wing, the base command function with Col. James W. Andrew, formerly commanding officer of the Air Depot, assuming full command of the newer unit. Colonel Andrew, as senior officer of the wing, acts as interim commander until the arrival of Brig. Gen. Walter R. Agee, later in January.

Upon the arrival of General Agee, Colonel Andrew will become deputy commander and Col. James T. Posey assumes the functions of chief of staff. Colonel Posey had commanded the 57th Fighter-Interceptor Wing and acted as base commander prior to the reorganization.

Under the new 39th Wing there will be the usual component groups including the 57th Fighter-Interceptor Group (Jets); 39th Maintenance Group; 39th Supply Group; 39th Air Base Group; 39th Medical Group and the 5039th Transportation Group. Included in the latter group will be the 54th Troop Carrier Squadron, the 5039th Base Flight (all administrative aircraft) and the 5039th Air Support Squadron.

The 5039th Air Support Squadron is charged with the operation of the Alaskan Air Command stations on the Aleutian chain, formerly at Elmendorf and assigned to the 57th Fighter-Interceptor Wing. The stations include Nakeek AFB, Shemya AFB, Thonbrough AFB, Cape AFB, and Amchitka AFB.

Functioning separately but in full support will be the recently activated 10th Air Division (Defense) with Headquarters at Elmendorf AFB, under command of Col. James L. Bryan, jr., formerly having operational control over the jets of the 57th Fighter Group, as well as the

Included in the group honored by the French Air Force were Brig. Gen. Carl B. McDaniel, commanding general of Randolph AFB and Col. James G. Fowler, former CO of the base.

In addition to General McDaniel and Colonel Fowler, Col. Shepler W. Fitzgerald, commanding officer of the 3510th Basic Pilot Training Group, was one of the group to be honored. Also the following:

Majors Harold M. McClellan, Robert E. Dawson and Robert W. Hall.

First Air Force

Col. Earl B. Cook has been appointed Comptroller of the First Air Force with headquarters at Mitchel AFB, N. Y.

Colonel Cook was assistant comptroller of the Continental Air Command for nearly two years before its reorganization into three major commands of equal status. He succeeds Col. George W. Johnson who is now Comptroller of the reorganized Continental Air Command.

SATURDAY, 13 JANUARY 1951

"Aroused and united, there is nothing which the nations of the Atlantic Community cannot achieve. Let those who might be tempted to put this power to the test ponder well the lessons of history."—GENERAL OF THE ARMY DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER, USA.

The Capacity to Produce. A relatively new objective in the present expansion program is the conscious, planned effort to bring about an increased capacity to produce weapons. In the past our production capacity has grown as the natural result of increasing output. This time, however, President Truman and Secretary of Defense Marshall are aiming to do better—they are seeking to so plan the procurement program that it not only will supply the fighting materiel needed now but also will result in such enlarged plant capacity and pool of skilled workers that our industry will then be capable of a much greater, and immediate, step-up in output. Using two items as illustrations, President Truman told the Nation in his message to Congress that we now aim for a capacity to produce 50,000 planes and 35,000 tanks a year. The potential production rate of other weapons and equipment for the Army, Navy, and Air Force is also being increased. To accomplish this feat of planned economy for defense without too greatly disturbing industry, and with complete fairness to those firms which have invested heavily in research and development for war equipment, will be a difficult task. But with a sympathetic understanding in government of industry's problems and with the cooperation of industry's leaders it can be done. In these days when war can strike swiftly and devastatingly it is a most vital component of that "enduring system of National Defense" envisioned by Secretary of Defense Marshall.

A Sound Medical Policy. The experiment of trying to shape the policies of the military medical services without the direct participation of the Surgeons General is ended. Deputy Defense Secretary Lovett has completed his detailed studies and analysis of the situation and Secretary of Defense Marshall has acted promptly and positively. He has abolished the Office of Medical Services and the 11-man Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee. In their place he has set up the Armed Forces Medical Policy Council composed of the Surgeons General of the Army, Navy, and Air Force and three civilians yet to be named. It will be recalled that the Surgeons General were secretly removed from the Medical Advisory Council in April 1949 and that after that date the top policy body and its agent, the Director of Medical Services, operated independently of and often without consultation with the Surgeons General. The closing of the large hospitals (which later had to be reopened) was recommended without reference to the military medical authorities. Budget figures drafted by the Director of Medical Services were accepted by the Department even though they were substantially lower than the minimum estimated by the Surgeons General as necessary to meet the Korean crisis. These were later increased in Congress. Dependent care, recognized as a vital factor in military morale, was on the decline. The new organization now decreed by Secretary Marshall restores the Surgeons General to their proper position in top level policy making and provides outstanding civilian professional men to work with them. Dr. Richard L. Meiling, former Director of Medical Services, remains as Chairman of the new Medical Policy Council and as adviser to the Secretary. In this respect Secretary Marshall specifically directs that such advice shall be shaped by the decisions of the Council. As a further safeguard the Secretary wrote into the new charter a guarantee that any of the Surgeons General dissenting from a decision of the Council may bring his views directly to the Secretary. The problems of the military medical services are as complicated and difficult as they are important. The new organization offers a sound, logical pathway to their solution and to the maintenance and improvement of the high standards that have traditionally distinguished these services.

Utilize Retired Officers. The Nation possesses a valuable pool of trained, skilled manpower in the retired personnel of the Armed Services. In World War II large numbers were called back to active duty and contributed generously to ultimate victory. If the present build-up continues, doubtless recalls will be resumed to fill specific needs. But there will be many who, for physical reasons or because of their military specialties, will not be put on active duty. However, among those remaining there are many hundreds who would be of the highest value in other governmental agencies. Their experience in administration and leadership, their knowledge of governmental procedure and requirements, and their deep devotion to their country ideally qualify them for many tasks less strenuous than field service. But present laws throw many obstacles in the way of employing them. Under various statutes they are barred from official civilian positions in the Federal service, that, combined with their retired pay, would give them total incomes of $3,000 a year or more. In some instances the maximum pay permitted is even less. The Retired Officers Association has repeatedly pointed out the loss in excellent services the government is sustaining by this policy. In the last Congress a bill was passed by both Houses raising this limit to $5,000, but it died in conference. Retired enlisted men are unhampered by such restrictions, which also do not apply to those retired for service disabilities. The bar should be lifted for all, or at any rate the limit should be raised.

Army Temp. Promotions

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Recent articles in the ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL on Army temporary promotion seem to take the stand that the safeguarding of the Regular Army permanent promotion list structure will be a paramount consideration in future promotions. Well known and generally admitted is the fact that officers who had been appointed in the Regular Army anytime from the 1930s to the beginning of World War II suffered an injustice as a result of the criteria set for integration of officers in the Regular Army after the War. As a result of Post-War policy, thousands of newly appointed Regular officers were placed on the permanent promotion list ahead of great numbers of officers who then had anywhere from five to twelve years more active duty and who had held higher rank and more responsible positions for a greater length of time throughout World War II.

It is certainly incongruous and absurd that the officers who were commissioned after competitive tours of active duty (Thomason Act) between 1937 and 1940 should be outranked on the permanent promotion list by considerable numbers of their later integrated contemporaries who failed to make the grade in the competitive tour—who separated from active duty for from three to five years—came back into the Army at the beginning of World War II—and served throughout combat in grades lower and in less responsible positions than the successful Thomason Act officers. The same integrated officers cited as outranking the successful Thomason Act officer generally outrank the majority of the graduates of West Point who after three to six years in the Army served with the future integrated officer while he was on the year's competitive tour of active duty between 1937 and 1940. This example is not unusual. It typifies the general inconsistency of the Integration System.

The Air Force is very progressive in their outlook. They seem to be new enough and broad enough to admit and to correct poorly conceived errors. They are already a jump ahead on present temporary promotion list policy. The clause "regardless of permanent grade" has been inserted into their new temporary appointment categories. This in itself will do much to correct inconsistencies existing in the permanent promotion list.

It is hoped that the new Army Promotion Board will go a little deeper into cause and effect than their predecessors.

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I am a Chief Warrant Officer in the Navy and I wish to convey my appreciation for your fine editorial in our behalf regarding the inequities of the Career Compensation Act of 1949. There is now no doubt that through your editorials and the fine work of the Warrant Officers Association of the Coast Guard and of Rep. Pat Sutton, remedial legislation will soon be forthcoming. In my estimation THE JOURNAL is the best source of service information that I have read.

S. 5189 is a bill introduced by Mr. Depew to create the rank of warrant officer in the Army, for the benefit of the post non-commissioned staff officers. This class of men in the Army have been too long neglected, and all officers who have been brought into close contact with them agree that the bill should receive the hearty support of the War Department.

This feat (Gen. SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—Western European democracies this week hailed the State of the Union message of President Truman as an assurance that the United States would continue its active aid to members of the North Atlantic Security Alliance in the defense against Communist aggression. Recent addresses by former President Herbert Hoover, Senator Robert A. Taft (R-Ohio) and others had intensified the fears of some European countries that America might withdraw entirely from preparations for the defense of Europe against a possible military attack by Soviet Russia.

Editors and diplomats in England and France accepted the President's address to the Congress as a reiteration of the pledge implicit in the Atlantic Pact that American aid would be forthcoming in the rearmament of western democracies, and in the protection of allied nations against attack. In his moderate, but forceful speech the President maintained that "strategically, economically and morally the defense of Europe is part of our own defense."

Without directly referring to the opposition of former President Hoover and his Congressional supporters to sending additional troops and funds to Europe the President made it clear that such aid would continue. He pointed out that if the resources of Western Europe were added to those of Russia the supply of Soviet coal would be doubled and its sources of steel would be tripled. If, in addition, the free countries of Asia and Africa should succumb to Soviet power, the President said, we would lose the sources of many vital materials, including uranium, the basis of atomic power. Such conquests, the President added, would give Soviet command of military manpower we could never hope to match.

Mr. Truman took cognizance of persistent reports that European countries are not willing to defend their freedom, and said their actions are answering that question. He said our Atlantic Pact partners have universal military training, and several had recently increased the length of compulsory service. The President said European forces are being trained and expanded as rapidly as their factories and ours can supply arms and equipment. The other nations associated with us in the Atlantic Pact, he said, are building armies bigger than our own.

The President referred enthusiastically to the designation of General Dwight D. Eisenhower as Supreme Commander of the international forces in Europe, including our own troops in Germany. He said the people of Europe have confidence in the general and know his ability to organize a fighting force of Allies. The President said General Eisenhower's mission was vital to our security and said he should have all our help.

On reaching Paris last Sunday General Eisenhower conferred for four hours with Marshal Bernard Montgomery, the noted British soldier who is expected to have an important post in the new international force. General Eisenhower also conferred at length with French Defense Minister Jules Moch, General Alphonse Juin and other French military leaders. General Juin has been frequently mentioned as commander of the Allied ground forces. Subsequently General Eisenhower flew to Brussels, the Hague and Copenhagen to confer with diplomatic and military officials. He plans to visit the capitals of all allied Western European countries.

French Communists attempted to stage a demonstration at General Eisenhower's temporary headquarters at the Astoria Hotel in Paris. The Reds also called for a transportation strike which failed to materialize. The agitators were noisy, but ineffective, and their demonstration was promptly broken up by the police. The Communists sought to arouse sentiment against the formation of an anti-Communist military force.

The nucleus of General Eisenhower's international force is already being formed. The United States will place its force in Germany, Austria and Trieste, including approximately two divisions of combat troops, under the new command. Great Britain has announced that three army divisions and a Naval force will be assigned to General Eisenhower. France and Italy each plan to contribute three divisions to the international force at once, with more later, and Belgium will assign all available troops, about 30,000, to the Allied command. Presumably substantial air units will be made available, as required.

In a speech this week Senator William F. Knowland (R-Calif.) favored sending more American divisions to Europe, but only in the ratio of one American division to every six divisions provided by our Allies. He suggested that this reinforcement of European defenses be continued until the European democracies have 60 divisions and the United States has 10 divisions in Europe.

Allied representatives are holding preliminary conversations with West German leaders on the question of using German manpower in the defense of Europe. Among the German representatives are two former prominent Nazi generals, Gen. Hans Speldel, formerly Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's chief of staff, and Gen. Adolf Heusinger, one of those who directed the German campaign against Russia. The United States is represented at the conference by Maj. Gen. George B. Hays, USA, Deputy High Commissioner in Germany, and Mr. Benjamin Buttenweiser, Assistant High Commissioner.

At Lake Success further, but apparently futile, efforts are being made to get Red China to end its defiance of the cease fire order of the United Nations. Sir Gladwyn Jebb pleaded for another attempt to arrange a truce in Korea. This action is in line with the proposal of the twelve Asiatic and Arab states to explore every possible approach to a settlement of the Korean conflict. It serves to defer adoption of the resolution branding China as an aggressor.

Despite Chinese successes in Korea there were indications this week that Red China was having serious internal troubles. The Peiping radio announced the arrest of 14,000 spies, alleged to be serving a foreign power, presumably the United States. Such wholesale arrests, undoubtedly to be quickly followed by executions, indicate that widespread opposition to the Red regime is assuming formidable proportions. In the British crown colony of Hong Kong the American consul general has advised American residents to send their dependents and belongings to the United States while transportation is available. The advice is said to be a precautionary measure in view of the general deterioration of the situation in the Far East.

In Indo-China the French have scored a series of local victories over the Communist rebels. These successes have relieved, for the present at least, the threat to the important city of Hanoi. While the numbers engaged have not been large the French counter-offensive is making considerable headway, and has retaken several important positions recently captured by the Reds.

Ships of the Fleet—The first flag of the United Nations to be flown from a battleship of the U. S. Navy has been given to the U. S. Naval Academy Museum at Annapolis, Md., by Capt. Irving T. Duke, USN, commanding officer of the USS Missouri, which vessel flew the U. N. flag at 0725 on 15 Sept. on order from Rear Adm. Allen E. Smith, USN, commander of the U. N. Blockading and Escort Force, to "Break your United Nations flag one minute before commencing fire." The flag was made by an enlisted quartermaster aboard the battleship.

The destroyer USS Keppler, flying a giant "Fleet Post Office" sign across her superstructure, delivered mail to the carrier USS Philippine Sea off Korea the day before Christmas. Included in the mail was a roll of movie film taken in San Diego which showed pictures of wives of many officers. Among the men who watched their wives on film were Capt. Ira Hobbs, chief of staff to Rear Adm. E. C. Ewen; Lt. Comdr. Gerry Miller, flag secretary; Comdr. W. Innis, executive officer; Comdr. Bobby Jones, staff operations officer; Comdr. Ed Deacon of a fighter squadron; Lt. Comdr. Ed Phillips, damage control officer, and Lt. Comdr. Abe Cohen, gunnery officer.

The largest mass takeoff in history of helicopters from an aircraft carrier occurred recently when eight flying "eggbeaters" flew off the USS Valley Forge to assist in the evacuation of wounded men. Lt. Raymond Lerl is in command of Helicopter Squadron Two. The Valley Forge has been hailed for her accomplishment in getting underway for Korea again only five days, one hour and eight minutes after docking at San Diego on what was to have been an extended stay in the U. S. Skipper of the carrier is Capt. James M. Carson, USN.

The destroyer tender USS Dixie, under command of Capt. J. R. Hamley, USN, with Rear Admiral Allen E. Smith aboard, gave a Christmas party for 100 needy Japanese children. Officers and enlisted men contributed approximately $800 for the party, with the gifts including a complete set of school clothes for each youngster. The ship's chaplain, Lt. Comdr. Robert A. Vaughan, was in charge.

The carrier USS Princeton late last month became the flagship of Task Force 77, under command of Rear Adm. Ralph A. Ofstie, USN, who recently relieved Rear Adm. E. C. Ewen, USN.

Since its late September arrival in Korea, the U. S. Naval Hospital Ship Repose, commanded by Capt. C. H. Perdue, USN, with Capt. E. B. Coyle, MC, USN, as medical commander, has treated more than 2,000 U. N. wounded. The ship can handle 786 patients at one time.

When the USS Wisconsin is recommissioned following demobbing at Portsmouth, Va., she will become the third battleship of the fleet, joining the USS Missouri and the USS New Jersey, the latter being readied for active service. Capt. Thomas Burrows, USN, will command the Wisconsin.

The 27,000-ton carrier USS Tarawa is to be taken from the "zipper fleet" and restored to service. She was commissioned late in 1945 at Norfolk, Va.

The light cruisers USS Phoenix and USS Boise will be sold under the MDAP program to Argentina; the USS Brooklyn and USS Nashville to Chile; and the USS St. Louis and USS Philadelphia to Brazil. The six light cruisers, declared "excess" to mobilization needs, will be used to bolster Western Hemisphere naval forces.

The escort carrier USS Kula Gulf is being prepared for active service. Work has now begun at the Boston Naval Shipyard and she will be placed in commission again on or about 15 Feb. Capt. Alden D. Schwarz, USN, will take command of the Kula Gulf at the time of her re-commissioning.

Nominal Pay for Universal Service—Criticism against proposals that 18-year-olds to be brought into service under Universal Military Service receive only "nominal pay" likely will be alleviated following testimony this week of Assistant Secretary of Defense Anna M. Rosenberg. She explained that the Department believes the 18-year-olds should receive $30 a month during the initial period of basic training—four to six months—and that they be paid at the same rate as other enlisted men during the remainder of their service.

She said "the pay differential in the initial training period is intended to emphasize that this period represents an obligation of citizenship universally fulfilled by all young men as a contribution to their country's defense."

Prior to Mrs. Rosenberg's testimony, Representative Paul Kilday, apparently believing that the Department was advocating "nominal pay" for these young men throughout their service, had protested and declared "our attitude has always been that a man in the Service should be paid for the service rendered and the responsibility assumed."

His remarks were made following a press conference on 4 Jan. at which General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, USA, leaving for Europe, emphasized the need for sacrifices by all members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and suggested the possibility of "nominal pay" for those called for compulsory military service. Asked if he was suggesting a lower rate of military pay, General Eisenhower gave this reply:

"I believe this. I believe that every country has, for itself, to devise and design the methods by which it can recruit and keep armies, navies and air forces of the necessary size. I believe that in that group there are certain professional cadres that must always be maintained and must be remunerated along professional lines, because they make a life career of it. People that serve for a definite specified time. I believe the government's concern for them should be for any distress, any dependents that are dependent upon them, for any disabled, taking care of everything of that kind. But as far as pay is concerned, you don't pay a person to go to school. You don't pay a person to work out his poll taxes. As far as I am concerned, it is an obligation to the state."

Tribute to Ground Soldiers—President Truman on 9 Jan. presented the Medal of Honor to relatives of five Army heroes and in so doing paid tribute to all ground force troops as he said: "At this point I want to pay tribute to the ground soldiers, the men who hold the ground and who fight from the trenches and from machine gun nests, and who receive the fire and the treatment which you have heard outlined in these citations. They are not the glamour boys of the services, but they are the men who win the wars and who make it possible for us to have freedom in this great Nation of ours."

Navy Nurse Corps—Ensigns and Lieutenants (jg) of the Nurse Corps, U. S. Naval Reserve, now on active duty are eligible for Flight Nurse Training. The training is given at Gunter AFB, Montgomery, Ala., and is the same as that given to members of the regular Nurse Corps. Applications may be made to the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery by those Ensigns and Lieutenants (jg) who are satisfactorily serving on active duty and who are not over the age of 30.

Expansion Impact on Housing—The effects of the expansion program are now beginning to be felt in the matter of housing for families of military personnel, the continued shortage of which has been cited by top officials as a major morale concern. At the Army's Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., 175 families, already residing in "austerity" quarters, will be required to move within the next six months, some within 30 days. The action is necessary to permit fulfillment of the accelerated Ordnance training mission at that facility.

Similarly from other Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps installations have come reports of eviction notices as housing facilities are being modified for other uses.

Military Map Needs—Stating that the need for military maps during times of conflict can never be fully satisfied, Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, USA, Chief of Engineers, this week urged the nation's photogrammetrists to exert "every effort of their science to ease the burden of the military." Speaking before the American Society of Photogrammetry in Washington, D. C., he called the military map a "blueprint of all phases of the military, from planning to operations," and pointed out that the key to modern map production is photogrammetry—the science of obtaining basic photographic surveys.

Prior to World War II, Pick explained, mapping activities of the Corps of Engineers were characterized by "extensive plans and programs, with insufficient funds to accomplish the work. With the outbreak of the war, no military maps of any foreign area were on file for distribution."

In contrast, he continued, was the efficient manner in which adequate maps were supplied for the Korean crisis. "On the day that South Korea was invaded," he said, "the Corps of Engineers had in stock, in the United States, 650,000 copies of 382 different sheets, representing a complete coverage of South Korea. In addition, the Far East Command had on file in Japan approximately a million and a half copies of these maps for immediate distribution among the different services. Moreover, during the first few weeks, the Army Map Service, together with the mapping unit attached to the Far East Command, published nearly 20 million additional copies. About half of this total was issued promptly in the fighting forces. Also during these first several weeks, about 200 of the very important large scale maps were revised to last-minute conditions from aerial photographs."

New AF Training Centers—With Lackland AFB, Tex., operating at capacity and Sampson AFB, N. Y., slated to begin training Air Force recruits shortly, there were reports this week that Air Force officials are negotiating for additional training bases. Speculation was that an indoctrination center would be opened on the west coast.

General MacArthur's Aide—The appointment of Capt. Sam Sims Walker, son of the late General Walton H. Walker, USA, as Aide de Camp to General of the Army Douglas MacArthur was announced in Tokyo recently. Captain Walker previously was assigned as Company Commander, Company A, 19th Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division.

Canadian Navy—The Tribal class destroyer HMCS Huron (Comdr. Edward T. G. Madgwick, of Ottawa) will sail from Halifax 22 Jan. for Pearl Harbor, where she will be placed under United Nations command. It is intended that the Huron relieve HMCS Cayuga (Capt. Jeffery V. Brock, of Winnipeg and Vancouver) in Far Eastern waters early in March, enabling the Cayuga to return to her base at Esquimalt late in the same month.

The Huron is the second destroyer to leave Halifax for service in the Korean theatre. HMCS Nootka (Comdr. A. B. Fraser-Harris, of Halifax) sailed 25 Nov. and is now en route from Pearl Harbor to Japan. She is scheduled to relieve HMCS Sioux (Comdr. Paul D. Taylor, of Victoria) in mid-January, with the Sioux returning to Esquimalt early in February.

The Cayuga, Sioux and HMCS Athabaskan (Comdr. Robert P. Welland, of Victoria) have been serving with United Nations naval forces in Korean waters for more than five months. They have taken part in a number of major operations, including the Inchon invasion in September and the withdrawal from Chinnampo in early December. More recently they have been engaged in blockade and patrol duties. The Athabaskan will be relieved in late April by a ship yet to be nominated.

The Royal Canadian Navy cruiser HMCS Ontario (Commodore Hugh F. Pullen, of Oakville, Ont., and Victoria) will sail from Esquimalt 19 Feb. on a 15-week training cruise to Australia. The Ontario will take part in early April in combined exercises with units of the Royal Australian Navy. She will return to Esquimalt 7 June.

Army Chaplain to Turkey—Assignment of Chaplain (Capt.) Carey M. Young to the Joint Military Mission for Aid to Turkey in Ankara was announced this week. Chaplain Young has been on duty with the Planning and Training Division, Office Chief of Chaplains. He is the first military chaplain to be assigned to serve the American personnel in Ankara. Prior to his assignment in Washington, Chaplain Young was on the staff of the Chaplain School, where he specialized in audio-visual aids.

Air Force Chaplains—More than 33,000 air miles were covered by two Air Force Chaplains, (Maj.) John D. St. John and (Maj.) Stephen J. O'Connor, who held Catholic Preaching Missions at overseas Air Force bases during 1950. Maj. Gen. Charles I. Carpenter, Chief of USAF Chaplains reported this week. The missions, designed to promote religious observance, were held at bases in the Pacific area, the North Atlantic, and in Europe. The chaplains' log recorded 360 Masses and 199 evening services during their year's travel.

Bureau of Medicine and Surgery—Rear Adm. F. C. Greaves, MC, USN, General Inspector, Medical, and his executive assistant, Comdr. Allen F. Bigelow, MSC, USN, beginning the week of 15 Jan., will inspect medical facilities of the 8th Naval District. Included in the inspection will be the Naval Station, Orange, Texas and the Naval Air Station, Corpus Christi, Tex. Lt. Comdr. G. A. L. Johnson, MSC, USN, Head of Industrial Health and Accident Prevention Section, will accompany the inspection party.

AF Medical Service Corps—Maj. Reuben A. Baer, Superintendent of the Aeromedical Research Institute at the Air Force School of Aviation Medicine, Randolph AFB, Tex., has left for Maxwell AFB, Ala., where he will attend the Air Command and Staff School. He is believed to be the first Medical Service Corps officer ever sent to that school. Major Baer will attend the Air Command and Staff School on a temporary duty status and is scheduled to return to the School of Aviation Medicine after completing its three and a half months course.

Letters to the Editor

JOURNAL it was noted that a bill (S-2351), presented by Rep. McCarthy, raising the dual compensation limit to $5000, was passed by both houses. Regarding this bill I wish to bring out a point showing that certain CWO's are being treated unfairly as the bill does not change anything except the amount of dual compensation that may be drawn. The point I wish to bring out is the fact that few Senators and Congressmen know that CWO's of the Navy are commissioned officers while CWO's of the Army and Air Force are not. Therefore it is my contention that this bill limits CWO's of the Navy to $5000 dual compensation when retired, while CWO's of the Army and Air Force may draw both retired pay and other compensation for federal employment without this limitation as they are not retired commissioned officers.

Similarly, during World War II when income tax exemptions for the armed forces was in effect, CWO's of the Army were totally exempt while CWO's of the Navy were only exempt $1500 as a commissioned officer. However, in the recent legislation for income tax exemptions for the forces in Korea it was noted that CWO's were not considered commissioned officers for the purpose of that bill. This is understandable and a step in the right direction since it would not have been fair to totally exempt CWO's of the Army and Air Force and not CWO's of the Navy in the combat area.

In closing, I would like to say, "Let us have unification." Are some CWO's to be commissioned and others not commissioned when interpreting various laws in effect? This is an important point and its effects are noted in S-2351.

"A CWO USN."

Army Personnel

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The announcement of the Air Force temporary promotion policy contained in the 23 December 1950 issue of THE JOURNAL reflects clear, logical thinking. Whether the Air Force benefited by observing the results of the present Army temporary promotion policy or by adhering to clear, simple logic is immaterial; the policy is simplicity itself and as fair as any promotion policy could be. (I am not an Air Force officer.)

The Department of the Army doctrine on personnel management is clearly expressed, and conforms to universal "big business" policy. For the past 50 years industry has trained young executives and rewarded efficiency with promotion. Young, capable and trained personnel is thus assured of a continuing incentive to produce. There the conformity ends.

The only incentive the young Regular Army officer has now is to recall the President's statement, "... cream of the crop of wartime officers ..." when the first 9,800 officers were selected from approximately 108,000 applicants for integration. Nothing has happened since to give them any idea that the "new army" is truly a promising career for a young officer.

The recent promotions to Colonel amply demonstrate this fact. Some of the new Colonels, efficient as they may be, were junior to some of the present crop of "hump" permanent Captains until as late as 1947. When finally integrated, some in the last group, their positions on the lineal list were determined almost exclusively by date of birth. Now, many of them without experience in a command capacity, they are permanent Lt. Colonels and temporary Colonels. From Captain to Colonel in 3 non-wartime years is fast in any army, especially when officers out of the United States Military Academy for 15 years are still permanent Majors.

Why is relative age the prime requisite for gaging ability? What has happened to the Stroh Board ratings? Of what value is the efficiency index?

This is my first and probably my last letter to any editor. The results of previous efforts of THE JOURNAL have resulted in so many constructive changes in armed services administration that I offer this opinion for whatever you think it is worth.

Captain (Permanent, Temporary, Perennial).

Pay for 20 Years' Service

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Representative Kilday's proposed omnibus bill to correct inequities existing in the Career Compensation Act of 1949, P.L. 351, 81st Congress is welcome news and would do justice to many a reserve component officer or enlisted man struggling to continue in the services for 20 years (in addition to his civilian and domestic duties) in order to earn retirement, if a pay column of "over 20 years" is inserted in between the 18 and 22 year columns, under the pay figures of the table "Cumulative years of service."

Title II of P.L. 810, 80th Congress requires 20 years of service before eligible for retirement, but after serving for 20 years one must accept, under P.L. 351, pay based on 18 years. It will be observed that the columns of figures up to that point are for two-year intervals, so why the injustice at that particular place?

M. Y. Heath,
Lt. Col. AUS Hon. Rtd. Lt.

The Monterey Peninsula Country Club, inspired by one of America's great generals, offers an abundant way of life to retired Army and Navy officers—in an area where some of America's most distinguished citizens reside.

This, the largest and most popular Club on the Monterey Peninsula, has a fine golf course, bathing pool, tennis courts—and a magnificent club house, with excellent cuisine, for an attractive social life. Although planned originally for retired officers, the Club has become so popular that, today, approximately half its members are civilians.

It is a proprietary Club. Membership is necessary before property can be acquired. Property ownership is requisite for regular membership. A generous building site, and a membership, are surprisingly low in cost, and dues are nominal.

Army Doctors Honored

Ten Regular Army physicians have been certified as specialists by American Specialty Boards during the last quarter of 1950, according to the Surgeon General's Office in Washington, D. C.

The 10 new diplomates raise the total of Regular Army medical specialists on duty to 214, as of the end of the year. In addition, at that time there were 78 Reserve and AUS medical officers on active duty who have been accredited by specialty boards.

The ten newly certified officers, and their specialties, are:

Col. Clifford A. Best, internal medicine.
Col. Andrew F. Scheele, preventive medicine and public health.

Lt. Col. Harold E. Shuey, clinical pathology.

Lt. Col. Lucius G. Thomas, preventive medicine and public health.

Lt. Col. Robert G. Thompson, dermatology and syphilology.

Maj. John C. Bates, radiology.

Maj. Lyle H. Edelblute, radiology.

cies of the government at the national level, such as the Department of State's Foreign Information Service and the "Voice of America," and at the top level with individuals responsible for inter-allied and global strategy.

The Operations Division will develop programs for the utilization of all facilities employed in propaganda warfare, i.e., electronic media, printed media and visual media. The Electronic Media Branch will plan the use of radio and TV from both fixed and mobile transmitters, the utilization of public address systems, loudspeakers and recording equipment. The Printed Media Branch will deal with the preparation and use of pamphlets, leaflets, books, magazines, newspapers, etc. The Visual Media Branch will provide for the use of motion pictures, still pictures, placards, posters and exhibits.

The fourth Division of the Office of the Chief of "PsyWar," Research and Materiel Requirements, will be responsible for guiding and evaluating research and development on techniques of delivering the output of the various media branches. These will include the more "conventional" methods of delivery developed during World War II, such as leaflet bombs and leaflet artillery shells, and the so-called "Buck Rogers" means visualized for the future, characterized by such innovations as the use of guided missiles for delivery of propaganda material and loudspeaker-equipped missiles which will circle over enemy installations and cities addressing the populace. A further function of this branch will have to do with guiding research into enemy attitudes and mental outlook. A search for the chinks in his moral and mental armor, so to speak. This division will also fulfill the normal logistical support function needed for the conduct of psychological warfare.

Below the Department of the Army level, psychological warfare staff and troop units will be assigned at the theater of operations level and with each field army headquarters.

The Radio Broadcasting and Leaflet Group, designed for operation at the theater level will be a fully equipped and self-sustaining unit. Transportable presses and mobile radio transmitters will operate under the control of the theater commander, supervised by a theater "PsyWar" special staff division, organized somewhat along the lines of the Department of the Army "PsyWar" office. In addition to operation of its regular equipment it is expected that this unit will also supervise the operation of indigenous broadcasting, motion picture and publishing facilities in countries occupied during the course of combat operations. These units will be staffed with their own technicians, writers, announcers and translators.

At the field army level, a fully mobile Loudspeaker and Leaflet Company will be available for regular psychological warfare operations, and for timely exploitation of the developing military situation. Equipped with small presses and loudspeakers, these units will fulfill a direct combat support role. It is intended that this type of unit will be capable of keeping pace with quickly changing tactical situations, and may be utilized by the Army commander for a variety of psychological warfare missions.

A secondary mission of psychological warfare operations comes into play in the wake of advancing friendly forces. It is during this transitional period that an "information vacuum" develops which must be filled by the output of our own information media if the maximum advantage is to be realized from the successfully concluded military operation. This "consolidation phase" creates a task of keeping civilian populations peaceful and orderly and informed on military government regulations, proclamations and general information affecting their welfare.

An examination of the results of psychological warfare operations in Korea lends further strength to the solid conclusions which have been drawn regarding similar activity during World War II. Contributions which psychological warfare can make in bringing about the defeat of an enemy are apparent and measurable. Intelligence reports from General MacArthur's Headquarters are replete with examples of the effect on the enemy of bombarding him with "Surrender Leaflets," "Safe Conduct Passes" and verbal appeals to his troops to defect, desert or surrender to U. N. forces. Prisoner of War Interrogation Reports indicate a high percentage of North Korean soldiers surrendering with safe conduct passes and U. N. leaflets in their possession. In cases where large elements of North Korean units have been illiterate, the loudspeaker appeals to them have proved effective.

Psychological Warfare, though non-lethal, has earned its place in the arsenal of weapons. As it has been so aptly put, "Paper is cheaper than blood."

AF Medical Post

Lt. Col. Robert H. Brooks, who has been stationed at Carswell AFB, Tex., since October 1949, has been transferred to Offutt AFB, Omaha, Neb., where he will assume command of the 3902d Medical Group and the station hospital at Offutt.

During his tour of duty at Carswell, Colonel Brooks commanded the 7th Medical Group and the Carswell base hospital until last October, when he was made assistant air surgeon in Eighth Air Force headquarters.

Military Censorship

The complexities of military censorship, imposed recently in the Far East, were receiving much attention this week. Pertinent to these discussions is an excerpt from an address delivered by Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, USA, Army Chief of Information, before the Radio Executives Club of New York on 11 Jan.

General Parks had this to say about military censorship:

"I think every responsible newsman—and our friends here like Ed Murrow and Hans Kaltenborn and many others will bear me out—no responsible reporter wants to cover war action without the guidance of the military to prevent the premature disclosure to the enemy of facts that may place in jeopardy a single American life. Notice I used the term 'premature disclosure.' I used the term deliberately. Military censorship, in the American way, is simply a holding action to conceal from the enemy—temporarily—information that would be helpful to him. It is not designed to conceal from the American public information to which it is ultimately fully entitled. Censorship, if you please, is merely a form of camouflage. It is an effort to buy time—for the moment—it is not a permanent action to conceal mistakes. We in the Army know that facts will out; in fact we take press and radio newsmen into our confidence for just such a purpose.

"Censorship is many times awkward both to newsmen and the Army. But so is war. Censorship plays its part in winning a war. Censorship, of necessity, takes many and varying forms. For example, here at home, with defense plants being re-opened, with orders for supplies, equipment, weapons research, running into the billions, we would be stupid indeed if we gave our potential enemy a blue-print of how we are going about defending ourselves. That would be the same as if a football coach revealed his strategy on Friday night, rather than on Saturday afternoon. And let's remember, that in America we always have a chance to join the Monday morning quarterbacks—or it wouldn't be America!"

MATS Speeds Evacuation

The Military Air Transport Service air evacuation operation has cut 10 hours off the 37-hour trip from Korea for war casualties and patients homeward bound from Japan to the United States, Brig. Gen. Wilford F. Hall, MATS air surgeon, announced recently.

The use of litter-carrying C-97 Strato-freighters in one-stop service from Tokyo to Kelly AFB, San Antonio, Tex., has reduced flying time for the 8,000-mile hop. Weather permitting, the giant ships stop only at Honolulu en route to MATS air evacuation terminal at Kelly AFB.

The regular route, followed by other air evacuation aircraft includes stops at Wake Island, Honolulu, and Travis AFB, California.

celled by the Secretary of Defense on 23 April 1949. At the time of cancellation, the estimated cost of constructing the United States was $189,000,000. The termination settlement agreement between the Government and the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company was concluded on 21 December 1950 at a cost to the Government of $2,718,672.12.

"In addition to Congressional approval of this carrier in the Naval Appropriation Act of 1949, it had Congressional authorization through the enactment of H.R. 6049, 80th Congress, which bill was reported by the House Committee on Armed Services and subsequently passed by both the House and the Senate. The Fiscal 1950 Appropriation Act carried an additional increment of funds for the construction of this large carrier which had already been started. This constituted the third approval of this carrier by the House of Representatives. It is pertinent to note that the House Armed Services Committee in its report of 1 March 1950, on Unification and Strategy, took the position that . . . "In the case of the modern aircraft carrier and its relation to seapower, those best qualified to pass judgment are very evidently our nation's professional Navy leaders." The Navy leaders, of course, were unanimous in their approval of a large carrier.

"The large carrier proposed in H. R. 398 is a further development of the Midway class. It will be of approximately 57,000 standard displacement tons and a flush deck design. It is intended as a base from which modern carrier aircraft may be operated. The Navy points out that it is not a revolutionary weapon, but is an improved conventional carrier into which the lessons of World War II and thereafter will be built. The ship will have increased catapult and arresting capacity, larger elevators and higher hangar decks overhead in order to accommodate larger and faster planes. There will be added armor protection and improved underwater protection. Fire fighting and electronic capabilities will be improved. The construction of this ship will not render the Midway-type or the modernized Essex-type obsolete. Its construction will place the Navy in a position of having at least a prototype for the test and operation of any carrier planes, the development of which may now reasonably be foreseen."

Ft. Sam Housing

Construction has begun on a 500-unit housing project at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., with completion expected by the end of the year. Rents will range from $57 to $100 per month, with 300 of the units reserved for enlisted personnel and 200 set aside for officers.

Munitions Board Reorg.

The latest element of the Department of Defense, subjected to fundamental reorganization under Secretary George C. Marshall, is the Munitions Board.

Since assuming office, Secretary Marshall has made basic changes in personnel administration with the naming of Assistant Secretary Anna M. Rosenberg, has tightened supervision of the guided missile program, and similarly has abolished the Office of the Director of Medical Services and the Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee to streamline administration of medical activities.

That there would be reorganization actions within the Department of Defense were foreseen when General Marshall was sworn in to succeed Louis Johnson, for he has always been a firm believer in a tight organizational structure designed to cut down on red tape procedures and speed decisions.

How the Munitions Board is to function under the new plan is told in an official Department of Defense release on 9 Jan., the text of which follows:

"A reorganization of the Munitions Board designed to provide a stronger organization and making provision for bringing top-flight businessmen into its staff, was announced today by John D. Small, Chairman.

"A major feature of the reorganization is the establishment of a separate office for stockpiling to give this activity a prominent place in the organization more in keeping with its importance. Stockpiling formerly was under the office of production management which had a number of other functions.

"Mr. Small said that the new organization was developed after careful study and consultation with the military departments, and other offices of the Secretary of Defense. Its primary purpose, he stated, is to strengthen the Board by regrouping functions into more efficient patterns and to provide for bringing in top-flight business men to assist in carrying out the many difficult assignments for which it is responsible. These will be vice chairmen and each will be assigned to a special phase of the Board's activities.

"The Board's operations have been divided into four broad divisions, production management, requirements management, stockpile management, and supply management. Staff and administrative activities come under a separate office for staff management.

"More direct lines between the Chairman and the divisions are a feature of the reorganization. Heads of the principal offices now report directly to the Chairman, whereas before they went through a Director of the Staff. This post has been discontinued.

"Composition of the divisions under the new chart now are as follows:

"The office of staff management, headed by a civilian vice chairman, will be responsible for administration, statistics, programs and plans, and international programs.

INDUSTRY * FINANCE * MARITIME

"All production activities will be under the office for production management. These include manpower and industrial security, facilities and construction, production programs, and the aircraft, petroleum, and electronics division. A civilian vice chairman will be in charge, assisted by a military director.

"The office for requirements management, which also will come under a civilian vice chairman, assisted by a military director, will include military requirements, material resources, priorities and controls.

"Stockpiling comes under a civilian vice chairman for stockpile management. The former stockpiling division which was under the office for production management has been divided into an office of stockpile programs, and one for stockpile operations and moved to the new division. This office will give full time to stockpiling operations and will have no other responsibilities.

"Supply operations are grouped under an office for supply management. This will have a civilian chairman with a military director, and will be responsible for the office of procurement methods, office of distribution methods, the cataloging agency, and the standards agency.

"Mr. Small said the selection and assignment of personnel to fill the new posts called for in the chart have not been completed but he expects to do this as soon as possible. As an interim measure, Mr. William T. Van Atten, whose appointment as a vice chairman was announced on 3 January, will be in charge of the office for staff management. Mr. Roscoe Seybold will be vice chairman in charge of the office for stockpile management."

Army and Industry

During fiscal year 1951, the Army has ordered more than $5 billion worth of materiel and the goal now is to make further contracts with industry for at least $2 to $2½ billion per month up to the end of June, Under Secretary of the Army Archibald S. Alexander told the annual dinner of the American Society of Automotive Engineers this week in Detroit.

Under Secretary Alexander noted that during fiscal year 1951 the Army will spend more than $4 billion in the tank-automotive field alone. He recalled that the automotive industry which produced 331 tanks in 1940 was able to manufacture 25,000 in 1942.

The Army official observed that "though the tanks of today and tomorrow are and will be far superior to those of World War II vintage, and though the cost of most things has doubled since 1942, the tanks we are now buying in quantity cost no more per unit of horse power than the tanks of World War II.

"The chief credit for this," said Mr. Alexander, "is due to the engineering brains and the manufacturing skills of the automotive industry working with the Army tank specialists."

He emphasized that the "impact of the Defense Program on the automotive industry will be tremendous," and said "there is no doubt that many companies will soon have cutbacks in civilian production caused both by the need for producing defense items and by the scarcity of raw materials for civilian items."

Praise Merchant Mariners

Privately-operated American merchant ships helped make the redeployment of thousands of U. S. troops and their equipment from Northeast Korea an outstanding success, and these accomplishments brought high praise and commendation from Admiral C. T. Joy, USN, Commander U. S. Naval Forces in the Far East, the National Federation of American Shipping reported this week.

Regarding the redeployment of equipment and supplies, the Federation stated privately-operated American merchant ships had successfully helped remove several hundred thousand tons from Northeast Korea.

In a congratulatory message to Capt. A. F. Junker, USN, Commander of the Military Sea Transportation Service for Western Pacific, Admiral Joy declared:

"Sincere congratulations on a job well done. Your performance throughout the Korean campaign indicates that your organization is best when the chips are down. Your initiative and your prompt and enthusiastic response to all demands in the successful redeployment of ground forces from Northeast Korea has been outstanding.

"The Merchant Mariners in your command performed silently, but their accomplishments speak loudly. Such team efforts are comforting to work with."

According to the Federation, the Military Sea Transportation Service had, at the beginning of the year, 174 American-flag merchant ships which were being operated for MSTs by private American shipowners and operators, and civilian merchant officers and seamen.

Figures supplied by MSTs Headquarters in Washington showed that American merchant ships operated under time charter to MSTs by private American steamship companies were carrying approximately 90% of all full shipload cargoes to the Western Pacific, excluding petroleum products.

Throughout the Fairchild mobilization for World War II, he assisted in the direction of the primary trainer program and later the development of the C-82 and C-119 Packets.

GM Aircraft Program

Preliminary planning work is underway for manufacture of F-84 Thunderjet fighter planes at the Buick-Oldsmobile-Pontiac Assembly Division plant of General Motors in Kansas City, Kan., it was announced 5 Jan. by J. E. Goodman, general manager of the BOP Division. Edward D. Rollert, assistant to Mr. Goodman, has been appointed manager of the new GM aircraft program in Kansas City.

Mr. Goodman said that his new management group would set up headquarters in Kansas City by 1 Feb. He emphasized, however, that assembly of automobiles at the plant would be continued indefinitely, gradually diminishing as tooling for the aircraft program accelerates. Every effort will be made to effect the conversion of the plant to the exclusive manufacture of aircraft with a minimum of layoffs of employees, he said.

The U. S. Air Force, on 22 Dec., awarded the contract for manufacture of an undisclosed number of Thunderjet fighter planes to BOP. The division will build them under a licensing agreement with Republic Aircraft Corporation, original designers of the plane. The plane is powered by the J-35 turbo jet engine, manufactured by the Allison Division of General Motors in Indianapolis.

Jet Engine Center

The General Electric Company has announced that a vast aircraft jet engine and turbo-prop test, development and production center will be established at Lockland, Ohio, to meet the increased military needs for G-E engines.

GE's J-47 jet engine powers such Air Force planes as the North American F-86, world's speed record-holding fighter; the North American F-86D, an even speedier interceptor version; the six-jet Boeing B-47 bomber; the four-jet North American B-45 bomber; and the Convair B-36 intercontinental bomber to which four jets have been added to augment power supplied by the six piston engines. The J-47, which provides more than 5,200 pounds of thrust or driving force, also powers such experimental planes as Republic's XF-91 interceptor and Martin's three-jet XB-51 bomber.

Auto Firm to Build Jets

Pratt & Whitney Aircraft division of United Aircraft Corporation is negotiating a license to permit the Chrysler Corporation of Detroit, to build the J-48 Turbo-Wasp jet engine for the military services. Chrysler will build the J-48 in a new plant to be constructed near Detroit.

William P. Gwinn, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft's general manager, said the license to Chrysler would be granted without fee and was part of Pratt & Whitney's industrial mobilization program to meet expanded aircraft production goals. Last September P&W announced that the Ford Motor Company of Detroit was licensed to build the R-4360 Wasp Major in a government-owned plant in Chicago.

NAVY SHIP STRENGTH

The Navy had been voted sufficient funds to operate 1029 ships in the active fleet during the current fiscal year.

The Coast Guard has announced that in order to speed up the formation of Organized Reserve units engaged in port security training, age requirements for a Reserve enlistment have been extended and no prior military service will be required. Heretofore the age range was from 18 to 35, inclusive, with the proviso that the 18-25 age group must have had a minimum of one year's military service.

The age range now is from 17 to 36, inclusive, and no prior military service is required of any candidate for Reserve enlistment. Preference will be given, however, to men whose civilian occupations and experience in port security duties will enable them to qualify quickly for petty officer ratings.

DFC for Gen. Soule

Maj. Gen. Robert H. Soule, USA, Commanding General, 3d Infantry Division, has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for the period 1 to 24 Dec., when he was in charge of troops covering the withdrawal of the X Corps to the Hungnam beachhead evacuation point.

National Guard Training

Federally recognized National Guard Army units will receive their annual two-week field training this summer in camps located throughout the United States.

Maj. Gen. Raymond H. Fleming, Acting Chief of the National Guard Bureau, announced this week.

The field encampments will start early in June and continue well into September.

Attendance at summer encampments last year was 92 per cent. It is expected to be approximately 100 per cent this year.

Navy Triples Quota

The Navy this week tripled its quota of enlisted Naval Reserves who will be ordered back to duty during April, May and June.

Early in December, the Navy set its quota for the three-month period at 15,000, but this was increased by 32,000 on 9 Jan., bringing the total to 47,000.

The majority of the men to be recalled under the new quota will be chief petty officers and petty officers of the first, second and third class. Some non-rated personnel with at least six months' service are also included in the quota, as are Waves in certain CPO and petty officer ratings.

tions Board, where medical considerations are involved.

Representative Rivers (D-SC), chairman of the House subcommittee which fought the closing of Service Hospitals and has endeavored to preserve the rights of dependent care, told THE JOURNAL this week that he believes the new organization will prove satisfactory. "Anything is better than the former set-up," he said. "Now the Surgeons General will have a voice."

Maj. Gen. Harry G. Armstrong, Surgeon General of the Air Force, commenting to THE JOURNAL, said, "In the opinion of the Surgeons General and of civilian doctors it will be effective. It will be streamlined and better balanced. The Surgeons General will have more of a voice and will be better satisfied. It will work beautifully."

Among the responsibilities of the Council are:

(a) developing and establishing uniform or joint programs in the Army, Navy and Air Force medical services, including joint utilization and cross-servicing of facilities;

(b) reviewing medical phases of budget estimates and legal proposals;

(c) initiating programs for standardization of various technical medical activities of the three services;

(d) representing the Secretary of Defense in dealing with other governmental and non-governmental agencies in medical and health matters of mutual interest; and

(e) developing close cooperation and mutual understanding between civilian and military medicine and the allied professions.

Participation by the Surgeons General will enable the Council to evaluate overall plans in relation to tactical and strategic missions of the three services and to consider operating problems presented by each.

The texts of Secretary Marshall's memorandum on the subject and his Directive follow:

Sec. Marshall's Memorandum

"The attached directive establishes, effective as of this date, within the Office of the Secretary of Defense an Armed Forces Medical Policy Council with the membership, authority, duties and relationships as set forth in the directive.

"Effective this same date, the Office of Medical Services and the Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee are abolished and all personnel, property, funds, records and unfinished business of such office and committee are transferred to the Armed Forces Medical Policy Council.

"All duties and responsibilities of the Director of Medical Services and of the Chairman of the Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee not provided for in, and not inconsistent with, the provisions of the attached directive, are assigned to the Chairman of the Armed Forces Medical Policy Council.

"Secretary of Defense directives of 12 May 1949 and 20 July 1950 concerning the Office of Medical Services and directives of 9 November 1948 and 30 April 1949 concerning the Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee are hereby rescinded. All other official action papers on medical and health matters executed by or in the name of the Secretary of Defense, the Director of Medical Services and the Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee remain in full force and effect. "All agencies of the Department of Defense shall keep the Armed Forces Medical Policy Council informed of such of their programs and policies as will be of interest to the Council and shall furnish the Council such information and assistance as it may require in the discharge of its responsibilities."

Text of Directive

"Pursuant to the authority vested in the Secretary of Defense by the National Security Act of 1947, as amended, there is hereby established an Armed Forces Medical Policy Council (hereinafter called the 'Council') which shall report directly to the Secretary of Defense; and in order to define the authority and duties of the Armed Forces Medical Policy Council and to define the relationships of the Council with the Military Departments and other agencies of the Department of Defense, it is hereby directed as follows, effective as of the date of signature:

"I. Membership of the Council

"The Council shall be composed of a civilian Chairman, who shall be a doctor of medicine, the Surgeon General of the Army, the Surgeon General of the Navy, the Surgeon General of the Air Force, who shall act for and represent their respective Departments, and three civilian members who with the chairman shall be appointed by the Secretary of Defense having been selected from among national authorities in medical and health fields of endeavor. The Deputy Surgeons General of each Department shall serve as alternates for their respective principals with plenary powers. The Chairman, with the approval of the Secretary of Defense, may appoint a Vice Chairman who shall, in the absence or disability of the Chairman, act for and exercise the powers of the Chairman. In the absence of the duly appointed Chairman and Vice Chairman, the Secretary of Defense will designate a Council member to act as Chairman.

"II. Authority

"A. Authority of the Council. Within its jurisdiction, as further defined in this Directive or as may be further directed by the Secretary of Defense, the Council shall be the principal agency of the Secretary of Defense responsible for performing the duties set forth in Section III below. As such, the Council, when majority agreement is obtained, except when formal appeal is presented as provided by Section II C, is authorized on matters within its jurisdiction, to issue directives in the name of the Secretary of Defense to implement the policies and decisions of the Council, and to supervise their execution.

"B. Authority of the Chairman. The Chairman shall have authority to take executive action in consonance with approved plans, programs and policies of the Council. The Chairman of the Council may, without being relieved of his responsibility therefor, perform any of his duties with or through the aid of such members or officials of the Council as the Chairman may designate.

"The Chairman, after consultation with the Council and subject to the policies prescribed by the Secretary of Defense, is authorized to establish such continuing or temporary committees, as may be necessary to conduct studies, assemble information, make recommendations, and otherwise to assist in carrying out the responsibilities of the Council.

"C. Appeals from Decisions of the Council. With respect to any decisions of the Council, a dissenting Council member representing a Military Department may initiate for submission by the Secretary of the Department represented by the member in question, an appeal therefrom to the Secretary of Defense. Prior notification of any action shall be given to the Chairman and other members of the Council. In the event the Chairman, or a member not representing a Military Department, is not in agreement with a decision of the Council, after prior notification to other members of the Council he may present his recommendations to the Secretary of Defense. In event of the presentation of formal appeals final action will be taken by the Secretary of Defense.

"III. Duties

"A. Duties of the Council. Subject to the authority and direction of the Secretary of Defense, the Council shall perform the duties listed below in support of strategic and logistic plans and in consonance with guidance in those fields provided by the Joint Chiefs of Staff; and in support of other Department of Defense programs. The Council will also perform such other duties as may be directed by the Secretary of Defense.

"Specifically, the Council is charged with providing, within its jurisdiction, such broad basic policies, plans and programs as will provide guidance to other Department of Defense agencies and will enable the Military Departments to prepare and execute detailed policies, plans and programs: The Council shall not engage in administration or operations for which an agency already exists. The Council shall:

"(1) Develop basic medical and health policies for Department of Defense in collaboration with appropriate agencies and departments.

"(2) Review medical and health policies, plans and programs of each of the Military Departments, with respect to:

"a. Conformity with approved policies.
"b. Adequacy when unilaterally developed.
"c. Consistency between the policies unilaterally developed.

"As a result of these reviews, initiate appropriate action.

"(3) Review the medical and health aspects of broad policies, plans and programs which other defense agencies (such as JCS, MB, R&DB, PPB, CCPB) are responsible for establishing, advising the Secretary of Defense of substantial differences of opinion on specific medical and health aspects of any given policy, plan or program, and recommend appropriate action. Assist in developing as requested, the medical and health aspects of such broad policies, plans and programs.

"(4) In collaboration with the Military Departments concerned, develop, coordinate and establish, when appropriate and necessary in support of approved policy, medical and health plans providing for:

"a. Uniform programs within two or more separate Departments.
"b. Joint programs by two or more Departments.
"c. Cross-servicing and joint utilization of facilities.

"(5) Develop the maximum degree of continuing cooperation and mutual understanding between members of the civilian medical and allied professions and the Armed Services.

"(6) Advise the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) in the review of budget estimates of the Military Departments for medical and health activities.

"(7) Recommend to the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Legislative and Legal Affairs) regarding proposals for new legislation or changes in existing legislation affecting medical and health services.

"(8) When appropriate and necessary, initiate and coordinate the development and use of standard medical nomenclature, reports, records, technical procedures and methods, and technical regulations within the Military Departments. Collaborate with agencies of the Department of Defense in similar efforts toward uniformity in such related fields as material specifications, budgeting and cost accounting.

"(9) Represent the Secretary of Defense in the coordination of matters of mutual interest and importance to the Department of Defense and other governmental and non-governmental organizations in the medical and health fields.

"(10) Arrange for any member of the Council to place an item on the Council agenda.

"B. Duties of the Chairman. The Chairman of the Council shall be the principal advisor and assistant to the Secretary of Defense on medical and health matters with which the Secretary of Defense may be concerned and will be guided in such advice by the views of the Council.

"The Chairman of the Council shall, with the advice and assistance of the staff, prepare policies, plans and programs for presentation to the Council.

"The Chairman, in consonance with views of the Council, shall represent or arrange for representation of the Department of Defense before and with other governmental Departments and agencies on all matters for which the Council has responsibility under the provisions of this Directive.

"In addition to participating as a member of the Council, in the performance of the duties assigned in Section III, the Chairman shall, subject to the authority and direction of the Secretary of Defense, perform the following duties:

"1. Serve as the presiding officer of the Council.

"2. Provide agenda for meetings of the Council and assist the Council in the prosecution of its business as promptly as practicable.

"3. Inform the Secretary of Defense of those issues upon which agreement among the members of the Council has not been reached.

"IV. Administration

"The Secretary of Defense will provide the Chairman with such personnel, facilities, and other administrative services as he from time to time determines are required by the Chairman for the performance of the Council's functions. Military personnel in approximately equal numbers shall be provided by each of the three Military Departments. In accordance with the needs of the Chairman as approved by the Secretary of Defense, such military personnel shall be acceptable to, and during their tours of duty with the Council, responsible to, the Chairman of the Council rather than to their own department with respect to performance of duty and efficiency ratings.

"The Chairman, subject to the approval of the Secretary of Defense, shall provide for the internal organization and staffing of the Council and shall establish its rules of procedure. The staff of the Council shall be responsible to and shall function under the direction, supervision and control of the Chairman.

"Committees operating within the jurisdiction of the Council will function under the authority, direction and control of the Chairman of the Council.

"The Council shall meet at the call of its Chairman, or at such times as it may fix, and the presence of five members or their duly designated alternates, including one representative from each Military Department, shall constitute a quorum.

"V. Relationships

"The Chairman, the Council, and staff of the Council are authorized and expected to communicate directly and expeditiously with other agencies of the Department of Defense and the Military Departments and appropriate sub-divisions thereof concerning any matter within its jurisdiction and in which there exists a mutual interest or responsibility.

"The Council shall coordinate its efforts with all agencies within and outside the Department of Defense which have a mutual interest or responsibility with respect to any of its programs, and will determine what formal concurrences, if any, are required."

Citation to Mr. Cooper

The Certificate of Appreciation was presented to Mr. Cooper on 5 Jan. by Deputy Secretary of Defense Lovett in the presence of military and civilian leaders in medicine and allied health fields and of Department of Defense officials. The following citation accompanied the award:

"Charles P. Cooper, for outstanding service to the Department of Defense from January 1949 to January 1951. At the request of the first Secretary of Defense, Mr. Cooper accepted the Chairmanship of the Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee, organized in January 1949 to advise the Secretary on all medical and allied professional matters and to develop greater understanding and cooperation between the civilian and military medical groups. Mr. Cooper has demonstrated a remarkable understanding of military medical problems, and with diligence and energy, he has assisted significantly in resolving many of them.

"The Committee spearheaded the efforts of the military departments in meeting the medical and dental personnel needs in 1949, and it developed the pattern for re-orienting military medicine in terms of its primary mission—the support of the combatant forces. After an exhaustive inquiry, the Committee under Mr. Cooper's guidance developed the present organizational pattern for coordinating the Military Medical Services through joint civilian and military direction at the Secretary of Defense level. The Committee sponsored an analysis of the medical services civilian components programs and a study of the special problems involved in the handling of psychiatric casualties.

"These achievements of the Committee, together with its many other advisory activities, reflect great credit upon its individual members, while the time and energy devoted by Mr. Cooper to directing this significant work represents a public service and a contribution to the national security deserving of the highest praise."

Experimental Subs

The Department of Defense this week asked Congress to amend existing law so as to raise the cost limitation on two experimental submarines now under construction.

The original ceiling of $30,000,000 was changed in August, 1949, to $41,000,000. The ceiling proposed in the new bill would be $45,600,000. To justify the increase, the Department stated that "The increased estimate of cost at this time is based upon further refinements of design which could not be accurately foreseen at the time of the last estimate, and upon the fact that new type components have been incorporated in the experimental submarines."
